On the occasion of the 500th birth anniversary of Margaret of Austria, Il Cammino di Margherita (Margaret's Path) was inaugurated, a trek across Italy from the Medici and Farnese fiefdoms to the Flemish region of Belgium, Flanders, where the Duchess was born. Giulia Alberico's novel will be presented at the different stages of the trek.

Margaret of Austria or of Parma (Oudenaarde, 5 July 1522 - Ortona, 18 January 1586), was a noblewoman of Flemish and Spanish origin, the natural daughter of Emperor Charles V of Habsburg and Jeanne van der Gheynst. Margaret was governor of the Spanish Netherlands, as well as being lady of a number of fiefs in Italy. By marriage she obtained, among others, the titles of duchess consort of Florence through her first husband, Alessandro de' Medici, and duchess of Parma and Piacenza as wife of Ottavio Farnese.

BASTARD AND BELOVED DAUGHTER OF EMPEROR CHARLES V, WIFE OF A MEDICI AND THEN OF OTTAVIO FARNESE, DUCHESS OF PARMA AND PIACENZA, GOVERNOR OF FLANDERS, HALF-SISTER OF FELIPE OF SPAIN AND JUAN, THE HERO OF LEPANTO, MOTHER OF ONE OF THE GREATEST LEADERS OF HER TIME, ALESSANDRO FARNESE. THE STORY OF THE MADAME TO WHICH THE FAMOUS ROMAN PALACE (PALAZZO MADAMA, SEAT OF THE SENATE OF THE ITALIAN REPUBLIC) IS DEDICATED. A CULTURED, REFINED AND INTELLIGENT WOMAN, BUT ALSO AN OBEDIENT PAWN IN THE CHESSBOARD OF HISTORY, WITNESS OF A WORLD AT SUNSET.

“The illegitimate daughter of Carlo V lives on in these pages as if we had her in front of our eyes. An exciting novel about a historical figure to be brought to light.” Carla Maria Russo

My life has been long and full. I have traveled through Europe. I have traveled mainly through Italy. I have met men and women of all kinds, but when I think about it, I lived totally alone. I do not know the habit of days all equal made of awakenings nights and meals with the spouse, the son, least of all father and mother. Always provisional and ready to the obedience that would have destined me to reside elsewhere.

Ortona, October 1585. Margaret of Austria has been in Abruzzo for several months. It is here that, after so much wandering for Europe, she decided to spend her last years. She found here a land she loves and, above all, that is only hers. Not a heavy paternal inheritance, not a privileged marriage. She is having a palace built by the sea; an imposing and precious building that welcomes and mitigates her old age. But Marguerite's time is almost over. A dark evil is inexorably creeping into her body and thanks to this forced immobility it allows her to take refuge in the memories of a full life for once, important but also full of suffering. Bastard and beloved daughter of Emperor Charles V, wife of a Medici and then of Ottavio Farnese, Duchess of Parma and Piacenza, governor of Flanders, half-sister of Felipe of Spain and Juan, the hero of Lepanto, mother of one of the greatest leaders of her time, Alessandro Farnese. It has been through a century of splendor and blood, she was a pawn in the hands of the emperor and two popes. She saw the end of a world and, above all, of the paternal dream: the one of a united, imperial and Christian Europe. But she was also a lover of beauty, from jewelry, to art and to music. And now alone with her chaperone, she finds herself wondering what the profound meaning of her existence is.

Giulia Alberico, with her wise and incisive writing, shows us the contrasts of a life divided between a public and private, loneliness, dissent, the tears of a character forced to obedience, but also the inner strength and the dreams of who was, above all, a great woman.

A SELECTION OF QUOTES

"A prose sipped, dry, never digressive and yet determined to advance slowly, almost wanting to evoke a slowness of things, a desire to stop time".

Mario Baudino, La Stampa

"And Giulia Alberico's writing is always admirable, balanced and discreet, as ironic as it is incisive." Giuseppe Pontiggia

"An increasingly intense writing, smoothed by the linguistic sensitivity that is a characteristic of Giulia Alberico's writing." Donna Moderna

"Memory is a precise narrative key that characterizes the works of the author who with this new novel offers pages to be savored with confidence, letting oneself be ensnared by her composed and storytelling prose". Stilos

"Giulia Alberico, a writer who has a lot to say about the world of women". Grazia

THE UNTOLD STORY OF AN AMBIGUOUS AND
IMMENSE CHARACTER OF THE ITALIAN RENAISSANCE

Rome, 1567. Vittoria Colonna, poetess, widow of Ferrante d'Avalos, marquise of Pescara and advisor to two popes, has been dead for some years now. And it is only after some time that her lady-in-waiting, the one who has been by her side from day one, decides to open the papers she has kept and hidden until the end: Vittoria's friends are now dead and no one is in danger of being condemned for heresy and treason any more. Vittoria, in fact, with Giulia Gonzaga, Cardinal Pole and Michelangelo was part of a group of people who tried in every way to reform the Church to avoid schism and condemned nepotism and the sale of indulgences.

But in those secret papers there is not only Vittoria the saint, the Christian, the reformer. There is also the woman, the inconsolable widow of a chaste yet very sweet marriage, the person in constant struggle with a contronatural body, and also Michelangelo's passionate muse and friend. Whom she perhaps loved as much as body and soul would allow her. An intense, poetic novel about a controversial and very modern figure in our history.

Giulia Alberico is an Italian writer. Born in San Vito Chietino, she currently lives in Rome. A teacher of Italian and History in high schools in Rome for thirty years, she made her debut in 1999 with the collection of short stories Madrigale, published by Sellerio, now in its twentieth reprint. He has published several novels, essays and short stories. For Piemme, she wrote The Lady of Flanders in 2021.

AN AGATHA CHRISTIE DETECTIVE STORY SET IN ANCIENT ROME 60 B.C.

Year of the consulship of Aphiarius and Metellus Celerus. Two murders on the same day shake the city of Rome. The first was that of Silanus, a former consul known for his conciliatory nature, the second of Roscius

Gallus, a famous actor much loved by the Roman people. Flavio Callido, a Roman nobleman of Pompeian faction and former Quaestor, in full cursus honorum investigates the murders. During the murder of Silanus, Callido finds himself in the domus of the former consul for a secret meeting with Giunia, daughter of Silanus and Servilia. There he discovers an unusual commotion at a meeting attended by some of the Republic's most notorious optimates who are waiting for an infamous guest, whose identity he cannot discover. In the corridors of the domus, Callido is spotted and, forced to hide, takes shelter in Silanus' private baths, where he falls ill and wakes up in the suburbs, without his noble ring. Callido is subsequently commissioned by Cicero to investigate the murder of his great friend Roscio Gallo. Cicero's goal is to accuse Publius Clodius of the murder of Roscius, who is already on trial for violating the mysteries of the Bona Dea. However, the investigation into the death of Roscio also reveals other possible leads, one of which leads to Arbuscola, a charming and cunning actress. Meanwhile, Callido is suspected and imprisoned for Silano's murder. Amid revelations and twists Callido and Arbuscola take the right path to discover what really happened. What awaits them will not only be the unveiling of the real culprits, Callido will realise that his certainties and principles will have to give way to new political compromises. Once the veil behind which the truth is hidden has fallen, one can no longer be the same.

UNA SERIE GIALLA ALLA AGATHA CHRISTIE AMBIENTATA
NELL'ANTICA ROMA

Primavera del 61 a.C. anno del consolato di Pisone e Corvino. Una serie di delitti sconvolge la quotidianità romana, già turbata da conflitti politici sempre più accesi. Gaio Rabirio e Crisogono, cittadini in vista accomunati da un passato di violenze e perdizione, vengono ritrovati morti dopo atroci sofferenze. Entrambi sono stati prima mutilati e poi giustiziati con un colpo al cuore. Un modus operandi che ricorda quello dei sacrifici umani officiati dai sacerdoti della dea Ma e richiama i Compitalia, festa religiosa dedicata agli schiavi abrogata pochi anni prima. Il princeps senatus Lutazio Catulo, approfittando della lontananza di Pompeo, affida l'indagine al questore Flavio Callido, chiamato a disimpegnarsi in una vicenda scabrosa in cui nessuno risulta al di sopra di ogni sospetto, nemmeno l'ex console Cicerone. Un compito delicatissimo che potrebbe compromettere sia la sua carriera politica sia la scalata al potere di Pompeo. La scia di brutali delitti, infatti, è solo all'inizio e ne faranno le spese altri personaggi illustri. A Callido, coadiuvato da una squadra sui generis che comprende Lutazia, giovane figlia di Catulo, Achillea, impavida gladiatrice eroina delle folle, e Cefea, ermafrodita figlio del gran sacerdote della dea Ma Archelao, il compito di far luce su un caso in grado di far vacillare Roma dalle fondamenta, strettamente connesso ai legami oscuri del cuore pulsante dell'urbe.

OMICIDI NELLA DOMUS.
LA SECONDA INDAGINE DEL QUESTORE CALLIDO
Piemme, Luglio 2018

E' la primavera del 61 a.C. Il giovane questore Flavio Callido, per ritemperarsi dalle fatiche della vita romana, si concede qualche giorno di vacanza presso la villa suburbana di suo padre Spurio, figura di spicco della politica durante la dittatura di Silla, ora ritiratosi in campagna per invecchiare serenamente lontano dagli intrighi e dai complotti dell'Urbe. Al suo arrivo nella domus, Callido trova un'atmosfera ben diversa dalla tranquillità agreste che si era augurato. Nella notte è morta Cecilia, seconda moglie di Lucio Calpurnio Bestia, uno degli ospiti illustri di Spurio insieme all'ex console Murena e a Fausta Cornelia, figlia del dittatore Silla. Tutti gli ospiti sono concordi che si sia trattato di una morte per cause naturali, tranne Marciana, madre di Cecilia e cugina di Catone l'Uticense.

Nel corso della notte, infatti, Cecilia era scampata ad un incendio divampato nel suo cubicolo ed aveva lanciato accuse precise nei confronti di Licinia, sorella di Murena, rea di volersi sbarazzare di lei per poter sposare Bestia.

Tra accuse e minacce, quando la situazione sta per esplodere, Flavio Callido, forse in maniera troppo impulsiva, decide di intervenire offrendosi di indagare. La morte di Cecilia è solo l'ultimo atto di una spirale di violenza che si è abbattuta sulla domus di Spurio e che ha portato alla misteriosa sparizione di uno schiavo, alla morte di una schiava e all'aggressione del convoglio di Bestia mentre tornava dal tempio della Fortuna a Praeneste. Le indagini sono più difficili del previsto ma Callido non vuole demordere. E tra i potenziali sospettati c'è da annoverare anche Spurio, il padre di Flavio Callido.

A fresh, free-flowing novel that has the ability to pull the reader into a parallel dimension despite the fact that the narrative of facts and circumstances belong to painful pages of Italian history: The Second World War, night bombings, starvation, round-ups, displaced persons.

The war rages a few miles from the Gothic Line, in the hills of Pesaro, where Germans and Fascists clash with partisans in the Toscano awaiting the Allied troops. The novel opens with a memorable scene, the arrival of evacuees during the second world war. To Evelina it seems that the souls of the dead are coming out from the snow.

Evelina is only five years old when the first evacuees find shelter in her father's barn, that moment when her life is overwhelmed and the carefreeness of childhood games gives way to the horror of war. But Evelina is protected by two fairies, the dark Nera and the cheerful Scèpa, and she has a power: she can see the world through the eyes of imagination...

The partisans are camped around the house in the country: their leader, The Toscan, has obtained food from Evelina's father, who sympathizes with them. Evelina and her brothers, Sergio and Maria one day find the corpse of a German killed by partisans: the Black makes them run away and hide moments before the Germans arrived. In a relentless succession of twists, on the hills behind Pesaro, the last year of the Second World War is filtered through the magic eyes of childhood, and includes Evelina's whole family and the secret of a Jewish girl hidden under a trapdoor in the barn.

Reality and magic mix and intertwine, bringing to life a peasant and fairy world, the tangle of civil war and world war. The dry style, enriched with dialect elements, makes the tale even more vivid: magic words, amulet words, nursery rhymes, opening the door to dream and prophecy.

PRESS REVIEW

«The surprising debut novel by Simona Baldelli is a magic book and not for the presence of the fairies, but for her natural style of writing that manages to blend real life and traditions, suffering and true stories, little moments of joy and absolute agony.» Alessandra Rota, La Repubblica

«A magical story, full of tenderness and mystery. A poetic and rhythmic novel, suspended between pain and redemption, between fear and strength that serves to undermine them.» Paolo Di Paolo, L'Unità

«A novel that conquers by managing to frame from an undoubtedly original point of view one of the many small individual stories of which the great History is made, understood as the founding moment of our identity: that History that never ceases to fascinate and to ask to be told.» Gaia Rau, La Repubblica

«An extraordinarily mature writing, this being a first work, and very expressive - making extensive use of a dialect very similar to that of Fellini's Amarcord and Otto e mezzo.» Andrea Carraro

« Simona Baldelli, a finalist for the 2012 Calvino Prize, refers precisely to Calvino, paying him an obvious homage with this book written with enchanted eyes.» Massimo Onofri, Avvenire

SIMONA BALDELLI, AFTER A CLOSE DOCUMENTATION IN THE ROSSINI FOUNDATION ARCHIVES IN PESARO, HAS WRITTEN A RIGOROUS HISTORICAL NOVEL THAT HIGHLIGHTS UNKNOWN PSYCHOLOGICAL TRAITS OF

MAESTRO ROSSINI.

“Writing a novel inspired by the life of Gioachino Rossini on the 150th anniversary of his death means making your own life wonderfully complicated. Because the first question you have to ask yourself as you look at the blank page is: what can you write about someone about whom everything has already been said? Someone who belongs not just to music lovers but to the collective imagination? Someone who in his lifetime was probably the most famous and acclaimed opera composer? The term 'Rossinimania' was coined for him in reference to his time spent performing in Vienna, where every street corner echoed with his music, postcards of his face sold like hot cakes, men dressed like Rossini, women sighed as he passed and restaurants had dishes dedicated to him. The same thing happened in every city where he lived and worked. Everyone wanted a piece of that jovial musician, with an easy hand at composing - he wrote the Barber of Seville in less than two weeks - a ready joke and a love of good food. And so he is still remembered today: a cheerful opportunist, a bon vivant. But, with the exception of some sacred and instrumental music, he actually stopped composing at the age of 37, after the wonderful William Tell. What brought the most famous musician in the world to silence?

This was the starting point for my journey through the life of a complex figure. A journey made on tiptoe, so as not to disturb the giant who had been resting in peace for the last 150 years. I discovered unknown, painful and deeply human aspects of Rossini's life that he attempted to conceal until his death, and he managed so well that he went down in history as a cheerful joker. His best comic opera character of all, we might say, and the mask behind which he was condemned to live.”

Simona Baldelli was born in Pesaro and lives in Rome. Writer, actress and speaker, her first novel, Evelina e le Fate (Giunti, 2013), was a finalist for the Italo Calvino Prize 2012 and winner of the John Fante Literary Prize 2013. This was followed by Il Tempo Bambino and La Vita a Rovescio, winner of the Città di Cave Caffè Corretto Literary Prize, a novel inspired by the true story of Caterina Vizzani (1735) - a woman who for eight years dressed as a man -. Rossini's Last Score is her latest novel. Sellerio will publish in 2019 the novel The Alley of Imaginary.

THE MIGRATION, THE SETTLING, THE SEARCH FOR AN ADOPTIVE WORLD, THE LANGUAGE AND ITS CONNECTIONS WITH THE COLLECTIVE CONSCIOUSNESS: THE WRITING THEMES OF ADRIAN N. BRAVI HERE MERGE IN A COMING-OF-AGE STORY, IN A TRAVEL CHRONICLE, IN AN EXISTENTIAL PARABLE - OR SIMPLY IN THE VOICE OF A YOUNG MAN WHO, AFTER LOSING HIS PLACE IN THE OLD WORLD, IS ABLE TO FIND ANOTHER WHILE SEEKING HARMONY WITH THE NEW ONE.

A FASCINATING NOVEL ABOUT SEBASTIAN CABOT'S TRAVELING, THE STORY OF AN EXISTENTIAL PARABLE THAT ALSO INCLUDES THE THEMES OF NATURE, LANGUAGE, INTEGRATION AND IDENTITY.

THROUGH UGOLINO'S VOICE, THAT CHARMS US FROM THE VERY FIRST LINES, A NEW VISION OF NATURE, LIFE AND RELATIONS BETWEEN HUMAN BEINGS OPENS UP BEFORE THE READER.

"I am asking you," I told Giorgina while holding the Periphyseon, "because here it says that there has been a second creation after Adam's. A creation that's a bit lopsided, I'd say, not perfect. But here," I said pointing at the forest, "it seems you have been created after the second creation, this one like a refined creation, retouched, do you know what I mean? The second, the one we have on the other side of the ocean, in the old world, is made of misfortunes and calamities. But this one, even if you do eat us raw, doesn't seem made only for man... Here all that surrounds us, trees, animals, marshes... they seem to constantly begin, as if we were at the dawn of everything".

Ugolino is forced to wear a hood because he was disfigured by a fire, and in the very urban Venice of 1526, scarring is a disgrace to keep hidden, a horror, the memento of the misfortunes that life can trample you with. But the young man cannot stay long in the room where he is holding up. Not tolerating his presence, his father decides to have him board the expedition of a friend who at that point can claim the title of Piloto Mayor: Sebastian Cabot. On April 3rd, 1526, Ugolino is aboard Cabot's flagship. The route is for the Maluku Islands in Indonesia, but the legendary explorer will never get there. Cabot falls short of the contract with the Crown of Spain to chase after the tale of a few survivors of a past expedition, telling about a city made of silver and gold. At first the fleet penetrates the Río de la Plata, then goes up the rivers Paraná and Paraguay. And it is while navigating on the Paraguay that Ugolino is captured by an indigenous tribe together with four comrades, immediately slaughtered and devoured. While he, freed from the hood, is spared precisely because of his disfigured face, since in those marks the natives recognize the touch of the Karai, the lords of fire. From then on, the young man starts to live with the indigenous people, discovering a nature, a culture, a humanity, a language to learn and understand without demanding or expecting anything in return. Because in those territories that barely appear on the maps of the West there is so much life to appreciate, as long as those maps and the usual perspectives on the world are overturned. A life that vibrates in each and every inch of reality and in the body of Giorgina, the girl that more than any other creature gives meaning to Ugolino's settling, pushing him to wonder what the ultimate meaning of creation is.

Vienna, 2020. Marcus is only fourteen years old when he gets suspended for five days, accused, together with three friends, of writing slurs directed at a Jewish classmate on the walls of the school. The young boy risks facing heavy charges, so his mother Johanna, desperate, turns to his grandfather Rudolf Steiner, a former teacher, asking him to step in and put in a good word with the current principal. Rudy, now eighty-four, deeply shaken by his nephew's actions, decides to go on a trip to Poland with him. It will be the opportunity to tell him about his incredible and painful past, that not even his daughters know about, and relive his story, that of one of the last Jewish children saved by Irena Sendler, the "Schindler" of Warsaw, the heroine of the ghetto who hid the real names of thousands of those children in a jam jar buried under an apple tree.

A GREAT EPIC NOVEL WHERE SPYING, ADVENTURE AND LOVE STORIES INTERTWINE MASTERFULLY AS ONLY A GREAT STORYTELLER LIKE CACUCCI CAN DO. A STORY THAT EVOKES A VERY SIGNIFICANT SEGMENT OF ITALIAN AND MEXICAN HISTORY.

The historical scene opens on 10 June 1940 when Italy declares war on Great Britain and France. Ten Italian merchant ships, almost all of them oil tankers, arrive in the Mexican ports of Tampico and Veracruz. In recent years, Italy had purchased large quantities of Mexican oil, and the outbreak of war took both captains and crews by surprise: although Mexico was formally neutral, the United States had been exerting strong pressure for some time. The Mexican government requisitioned the ten ships and the sailors were eventually “deported” to Guadalajara.

Here, many of them formed families with local women and adapted to many trades, first and foremost the one in which Italians excel, namely opening restaurants and pizzerias, and gave rise to the current “Italian community” in the capital of Jalisco, made up of the children and grandchildren of those sailors (few of them chose to return to Italy at the end of the war, and some of them, after a certain period, decided to return to live in Mexico).

Stuck in port for about a year and a half, in December 1941 the Italian ships were officially requisitioned and, renamed, set sail again with Mexican crews; the ship Lucifero (the real name of one of the merchant ships), a sort of mixed cargo ship that carried various goods but also had special tanks for oil, became Potrero del Llano, and on 15 May 1942, it was torpedoed by a German submarine. The old Lucifero became a casus belli: Mexico declared war following this sinking (other former Italian ships would follow its tragic fate). However, some Mexican historians – as well as many Italian sailors in Guadalajara – favour the opposite hypothesis: it was a US submarine that sank the Lucifero-Potrero del Llano, precisely to induce Mexico to break the deadlock.

Furio, boatswain of the Lucifero, is in constant conflict with the fanatical Matteo Govoni from Ferrara, but even more dangerous is the radio operator Aurelio Pizzi, who uses the radio telegraph apparatus to send dispatches to Italy... Aurelio is an agent of the OVRA, the Fascist secret police, and one of his tasks is to report “defeatist” or openly anti-Fascist behavior: no one suspects his true role on board, and paradoxically he establishes a good relationship with Furio... and occasionally seems to play cat and mouse with him, sensing that he is hiding something behind his reserve... Obviously, Aurelio knows that Furio has not joined the National Fascist Party, but he avoids asking direct questions: after all, he has a certain sympathy for the boatswain...

What creates an irresolvable conflict in Aurelio, at a certain point, is the order from Italy to attempt by any means to sabotage and set fire to the captured ships... Only the captain of another ship and two of his officer’s attempt to carry out the nefarious deed (the petrol can is provided by the ultra-fascist Govoni...), starting a fire on board the oil tanker Atlas, which is quickly extinguished by the Mexican fire brigade. This action results in a restriction of freedom for all the sailors (arousing the resentment of many), who are then transferred to Guadalajara.

A Mexican military intelligence officer, Colonel Felipe Aguirre, approaches Furio and establishes an increasingly 'enveloping' relationship with him. When Aguirre reveals that he has intercepted a cable from the OVRA headquarters in Rome to the Italian embassy ordering Furio to be kept under close surveillance as a "probable anti-fascist and defeatist" and, if necessary, "put in a position where he cannot betray his country", i.e. physically eliminated, Furio does not know whether the Mexican officer is bluffing, but he cooperates with the Mexican government anyway. And so, the staging of his "escape" is organised. In reality, Furio has been persuaded to go to Chiapas to find out what is going on at a large coffee plantation known as Casa Braun (owned not by Eva Braun's brother, as many still believe today, but by her cousin), a vast estate that produces tonnes of high-quality coffee for export. Colonel Aguirre's intention is to find out whether "los alemanes del Soconusco", the wealthy German landowners in that region of Chiapas, are plotting a coup to be carried out by the Synarchists, the strong Mexican far-right movement sympathetic to Hitler, Franco and Mussolini... And at Casa Braun, it seems that Eva, the Führer's companion, visits several times...

And so Furio finds himself, despite himself, the protagonist of a spy story in which he risks his life, infiltrating the Nazis in Chiapas. In certain situations, he is saved by Aurelio, a double-crossing OVRA agent who has been accepted by Hitler's Germans as one of their own... Amalia, a young woman as beautiful as she is mysterious, approaches Furio and establishes a relationship with him that is at times incomprehensible. Amalia was born on Braun's coffee plantation, the daughter of a couple of indigenous labourers, where she suffered abuse and violence from a "German guest" and his acolytes since she was a child. and then as a teenager she fled when her father, after killing one of little Amalia's rapists, was hanged by the German guards, who also murdered her mother... Her thirst for revenge drove her to become what she is: ruthless and deadly, trained in the use of weapons and very skilled in her "craft". But at the same time, she is capable of moments of passion and abandonment for Furio, and the two unite in their loneliness and find themselves living an "impossible" relationship... For Amalia and Furio, the time has come to right the wrongs they have suffered. Aurelio Pizzi, or Aurel Spitz from South Tyrol, converges on Casa Braun, where Furio also arrives under the false identity of the ultra-fascist Matteo Govoni... The two strengthen their friendship, transforming it into complicity in order to survive in the "den of wolves", and at a certain point they discover a secret hidden in the basement of the Braun house. Amalia, an operative of Colonel Felipe Aguirre, reveals it...

"The simple soldier of the Tercios Viejos de Napoles Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra was sitting on the barrack cot, sipping red wine with the Sargento Mayor who was in charge of his company of infantrymen; the other was standing, his back leaning on the wall next to the large window overlooking the alleys that rose steeply up to Castel Sant'Elmo.

The familiarity that had been established between them, after a series of vicissitudes, was encouraged by the good red wine...

«I come from an island off the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, Elba. Tormented by the Turks, who burned my mother alive and kidnapped my sister, at the time hardly more than a child... And I will find her.»

The Spanish man took another sip, with a pensive expression.

«You will find her... and do you know where she is now?»

«Yes.»

Miguel understood that that issue had to be left to settle, and later on, perhaps... He preferred to satisfy other curiosities.

«Since I was fifteen years old.»

Miguel raised his eyebrows, thinking that this forty-something veteran had to have been to hell and back; besides, his face, that looked like it had been carved in stone and marked by all kinds of scars, was an adventurous tale in itself that piqued his desire to know more.

«Without ceasing?» asked Miguel.

«Aren't you tired of all the blood?»

Lucero nodded slowly.

«Yes. But only Sister Death will give me peace.»

«Why do you call it that? Are you devoted to Saint Francis? I thought you were to Archangel Michael.»

«I'm devoted only to this» he answered patting the hilt of his sword in the sheath.

«Well, after all, the sword is a cross, in every way...»

Elba Island, spring of 1544. The Turkish corsairs, led by Khayr al-Din known as Barbarossa, admiral of the fleet of Suleiman the Magnificent, disembark at night on a beach nearby Longone - today Porto Azzurro - starting the invasion of the island.

Sixteen-year-old Lucero and his sister Angiolina, one year younger, are preparing for squid fishing: the night is favorable, but in truth the Red Moon is shining, an ill omen. Sure enough, the Turkish corsairs arrive, wounding Lucero and kidnapping Angiolina.

Lucero becomes an "unbeatable dueler" and a soldier of fortune, driven by an overwhelming feeling of revenge, and Angelina enters the Lord of Algiers' nuptial bed: she changes her name to Aisha, she gives a son to the sovereign of the corsair city-state, becoming the Favorite.

Lucero ("the Elban errant") goes on to slaughter Turks while Angiolina-Aisha ("the Christian whore") is the right hand woman of the Pasha.

Lucero falls into disgrace - for a murder committed as an assassin - with the Duke of Tuscany, he joins the Tercios of Naples and sets sail on a galleon en route for Veracruz, in the Nueva España (that is Mexico), land of the brutal Conquistadores. Then he comes back to Europe and finds himself fighting at Lepanto, the "Battle of the battles". And that's where he meets, hardly more than twenty years old, Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, who fled Spain after killing (or perhaps only seriously wounding) a man in a duel (who had ridiculed his poems...). Lucero found out from the Trinitarian friars (who in Algiers negotiate the liberation of Christian slaves) that Angiolina is there, and she is alive. All that's left to do is exact his revenge and take his sister and nephew Jalal with him.

Pino Cacucci sets in motion a giant narrative machine grinding adventures, history, poetry, ships, arms, commanders, concubines, religious beliefs, battles, massacres and sentiments. Through Lucero we follow Cervantes from Lepanto to the writing of Don Quixote. With Angiolina/Aisha we are on the stage of Algiers, the corsair city-state par excellence. Everything becomes - synthesis of the spirit of the novel - adventure. But an adventure about repression and injustice, the other side of the Renaissance.

At the end of the novel, an "epilogue" narrates the life of Cervantes from the liberation in Algiers - which occurred on October 24th, 1580 - until Don Quixote, through frustrations and disappointments, every kind of difficulty (among which a period in prison) and a wretched life in various professions... There may be a sequel to the novel.

SAN PATRICIO'S BATTALION IS ABOUT THE FAILED BATTLE OF JOHN RILEY, AN IRISH EMIGRANT WHO LEFT THE AMERICAN ARMY FOR THE MEXICAN SIDE, IN SEARCH OF JUSTICE AND PEACE. IT'S ABOUT THE MADNESS OF WAR - A BOOK THAT RESURRECTS, ALONG WITH A LITTLE - KNOWN EPISODE IN AMERICAN HISTORY, THE TRUTH (OR AT LEAST PART OF THE TRUTH) THAT WE OTHERWISE DARE NOT TO KNOW

Captain John Riley is among the few survivors of a war that devastated Mexico. he is now being looked after by a former guerrilla fighter and his faithful friend Consuelo, in a humble home in Veracruz. In 1846, America used the war as a pretext to annex Texas and also to occupy, during approximately two years of fighting, California, Utah, Colorado, Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico. The conflict marked a singular phenomenon: a large number of the Irishmen enrolled left the American forces in order to join the Mexican army. Among them was the artillery lieutenant John Riley, who formed the Batallón San Patricio, and who would go on to inflict severe damage to the troops led by Generals Taylor and Scott. These Irishmen were considered not only deserters but symbols of supreme betrayal. After the war's last battle, in the suburbs of Mexico City, the triumphant troops attacked the few surviving members of the San Patricio unit, and, with extreme ferocity, flogged them and branded them with the letter "D," for deserter. Then they hanged them. All but one: Captain Riley. Mexico was a place Riley could call home. And now, after the fighting recedes, the epic wave of memory returns, the horror of the massacres as well as the memory of the close but troubled friendship between Riley and Captain Aaron Cohen, the head of West Point.

A GRIPPING NOVEL IN WHICH THE TRAGICNESS OF WAR IS COUNTERBALANCED BY GIOTTO'S EXUBERANT SYMPATHY AND THE LOVE BETWEEN A MOTHER AND SON.

"In the dormitory of the civil hospital in Salò, Giotto's legs dodged nurses and cots like skittles. The child did not follow a straight line and skirted in a dishevelled manner, in the unpredictability suggested by a consolidated experience of escapes. The kneecaps protruding from the short arms were reminiscent of chestnuts, and the baràcula ears had taken on the bright colour of the bragia. Giotto was panting in the hot half-light, desperate in his avaricious ten years, and at the sides of his mouth the saliva had congealed to form small white clumps. And yet, that pathetic body harboured an unsuspected energy: it looked like a disorderly galloping horse, whipped by the bilingual barks of the sanitary men: "Halt! Halt!"

"Ven ché, ricie à vela!", come here, sailing ears! "Verdammt, hor auf!", stop, damn you! When finally a German doctor grabbed him, the bite was instantaneous, vicious. The unfortunate man screamed untranslatable imprecations and left him, shaking his bitten hand. Giotto set off again, his heart bursting in his chest, inside his tank top smeared with congealed blood. In the loneliness of his shaven head he shouted one word: courage!"

Giotto, a 10-year-old orphan originally from Romagna, and Andrea, a young doctor, have chosen each other and, in the chaos, even legislative chaos, of the war, Andrea manages to take him with her and in fact adopt him. On Lake Garda, where the woman's parents live, Andrea and Giotto have to overcome the town's mistrust and bureaucratic difficulties, while around them the Republic of Salò is born, and they have to deal with the Nazi occupiers and the fascists surrounding Mussolini.

Declared a hospital zone, the Riviera is apparently quiet, and Andrea uses her professional position to help the partisans: with the complicity of the parish priest she clandestinely treats a British aviator, gathers confidential information while working at a German military hospital and as a company doctor for a Fiat aircraft workshop. Discovered and arrested, she manages to get away with it. A gripping story in which the tragicness of war is counterbalanced by Giotto's exuberant sympathy and the love between a mother and son.

Paolo Casadio made his debut with the novel La Quarta Estate (Piemme, 2014), it won several literary Awards: the 17th Prix Ravenna, the National Dolphin Prize of Costa Pisana 2015, the International Montefiore Conca Award 2015, the International Award for a Debut Novel Cinqueterre-Sirio-Guerrieri 2015, the Jury Award of the International Prize “Città di Pontremoli 2016”, the Prize “Cattolica 2016”, the 30° Massarosa Prize for debut novel, the Carver Prize 2017 and the Francesco Serantini Prize 2017. Il bambino del treno has won in 2018 the Palmastoria Award, the San Domenichino Literary Award, the Zeno Prize, the Città di Massa Prize, the Crovi-Letteratura d'Appennino Award, the Cava de' Tirreni Award and the Locanda del Doge Prize and it's finalist at Lord Byron Award 2018, at Città di Arcore Prize, at Città di Murex Prize and at Massa Città Fiabesca Prize.

A HOLOCAUST SURVIVOR BECAUSE OF HER BEAUTY, ALMA VITA FINDS HERSELF IN AN ITALY DEVASTATED AND CRUMBLING BY THE WAR WITHOUT A HOME AND IN A COUNTRY THAT SHE DOES NOT RECOGNIZE.

BUT THE GREATEST DAMAGE IS THE ONE SHE CARRIES IN HER INTIMACY, AND ONLY THE SEARCH OF HER DAUGHTER CAN GIVE HER THE STRENGTH TO COME TO TERMS WITH LIFE.

In that excised existence she saw the reflection of her loved ones, the shame of surviving them. And everywhere she felt inside the long humiliation suffered: the sour taste in the mouth, the miserable and persistent feeling of violence. She had to clean up, in that warm and little pond, the perfect body that saved and condemned her because she no longer perceived its meaning, the breath and air that donate the perception of her last short life.

With the determination similar to dogs when they lick their paws, she rubbed with the soapy sponge the tattooed numerical mark, until the skin turned red. As to disintegrate it in a liquid mist because there was nothing except incredulity. The reality of the hell nullified the possibility of later existence, the possibility of God, because that hell was so bottomless and without dignity to leave no hope. There was nothing more. Only Cottonflower.

“And this is the strength of the story, Alma's return journey, from Poland to Romagna, in search of her child, but for her, who came from the hell, it is an incessant struggle not to go to Sheol, the kingdom of shadows.” La Repubblica

A dip in the violent convulsions of the newly liberated Italy.” Corriere di Romagna

In June 1945 Alma Vita, Omero Da Fano's wife, returns to Lugo di Romagna where, in December 1943, she was arrested with her family for the order's execution to intern all Jews (Order Buffarini-Guidi number 5 of 30/11/43). Only Alma survived the camp. Her beauty saved her in a destructive way, taking away any reasons to exist except the search of her daughter Velia, hidden by a stranger at the time of the arrest. In June 1945, Alma Vita is one of the sixty million “displaced persons”: refugees, prisoners, deported, interned, civilians, soldiers. All people outside their national borders for war’s reasons that, with unspeakable efforts and all sorts of difficulties, undertake the way back. Alma’s long journey unfolds from Poland to the “Romagna” through Switzerland. The entry into Italy reveals a country crumbled by the conflict and the contradictions that followed the end of hostilities. Alma looks, observes, but she does not care about the damages she sees. The greatest destruction is inside her. Her only thought, her obsession is to find Velia to lead her into a world where violence is banned. In Lugo, Alma can’t find anyone from the Jewish community. Her home has been confiscated and sold. The help of an enterprising priest, a redeemed hustler and a repentant marshal of Carabinieri let her discover where her daughter was taken. The journey continues and the search for her daughter becomes a reason to recover her identity.

THE STORY OF A FATHER, A FASCIST STATIONMASTER, AND HIS RACE AGAINST TIME TO REACH THE TRAIN IN WHICH HIS SON – AS A GAME, OR PERHAPS FOR LOVE – HAS BOARDED. A TRAIN DIRECTED TO AUSCHWITZ

Giovannino Tini has passed the public exam to become a stationmaster, but - despite his misgivings - has been forced to join the PNF (The National Fascist party) to have a chance at a career. He starts his new job in the station of Fornello in June 1935, accompanied by his pregnant wife, a dog of uncertain breed and two bicycles which cannot be used because there is nowhere nearby to ride them: in the Apennine valley where the station sits there are only mule tracks and mountains. Three months later, their son Romeo is born, and the child grows up surrounded by deep snow, trains which pass through without stopping and the unchanging rhythms of nature. The valley seems almost to have been forgotten by the regime. One evening in December 1943, however, a train unlike the others shatters their isolation. Aboard are men, women and children headed for Germany. Romeo meets Flavia, a Jewish girl who comes from far away, and an intense relationship springs up between the two, along with a powerful desire to be together. This is the reason why, the morning when the train departs, Romeo is accidentally boarded along with the other deportees. Seventy years later the station is closed and the valley abandoned, and only one of Romeo's friends remains to tell their story. With its powerful, refined style, The Kid on the Train accompanies the reader through the childhood of generation which was ruined by dictatorship, racial laws and war.

*“It's the third Rinascente I've seen,” whispers Bice, feeling her granddaughter's hand slip away. Cristina's eyes are fixed on the escalator. Bice watches her go up and down quickly and cheerfully. Ferdinando and Luigi Bocconi have a dream. After watching their father wear himself out walking the streets and visiting farmhouses with a basket of fabrics on his shoulders, a real shop selling beautifully made clothes represents the future. In Milan, however, so close and yet so far from their hometown of Lodi. Then, their little dream becomes reality, winning the hearts of the Milanese day by day; it grows as big as that little shop, which is transformed into the first department store, opened right in Piazza del Duomo. The year was 1889. Bice, the daughter of a Bocconi warehouse worker, is already eight years old but has never seen such beautiful dolls, with real clothes, and as she climbs the endless stairs, she decides that this world of wonders will also become a little bit hers. The family of seamstresses on the top floor, who create magic every day, welcomed her, and Bice repaid them with a lifetime of dedication and affection. It is 1917 when the dream passes to the captain of industry Borletti, whose name is Senatore, and who sees in that factory of desires much more than a good investment: even when the department stores go up in smoke, La Rinascente will rise from the ashes, shining like a phoenix. Behind those counters worked Eleonora, Bice's daughter, who grew up in the salons she knew better than her own home. And with her gaze fixed on the spires of the Duomo, Cristina, Eleonora's daughter, would also find her own way to continue the family tradition. In front of the shop windows and the eyes of Le Ragazze della Rinascente (The Girls of La Rinascente), the years of the African campaign, the world wars, the street riots and the reconstruction pass by. Extraordinary and terrible events that stop there, touching their lives or flowing away. But nothing will affect the certainty of having realized, right there, their little dream: a dream called independence and freedom.

And it is precisely on the wide stairs of La Rinascente that Bice, Eleonora and Cristina, grandmother, mother and daughter, move industriously: three generations of women who, through their work within those historic and luxurious walls, would build their lives as seamstresses, shop assistants and graphic designers, dreaming and, perhaps, seeing a better future come true.

«The conches are still in operation, and make the rolls shake: the cocoa slowly mixes with the sugar. There isn't much to mix, but the scent is strong and inebriating. The tusa walks by the machine as she heads toward her position, and she closes her eyes to savor all its intensity. The war is over and Zaini is back!»

“There are no sacrifices when you love“. It is with these words that Olga Torri agrees to become Luigi Zaini's wife and mother of his two children, Piero and Rosetta, who have recently lost their mother. Luigi is a kind and discreet man with a big dream, a chocolate factory in Milan. And Olga falls in love with his kindness and chocolate scent, as well as with the dream of a company like Zaini, that she immediately makes her own. Between conches and mixers, roasting and cooling machines and tables of wrappers, the factory grows, expands - as does the family where Luisa and Vittorio arrive - and experiments with new and original products; but it especially becomes a point of reference for its workers, the shop boys and the many tuse, “girls” in Milanese dialect, fundamental and tireless workers who, with their cold hands, don't melt the chocolate. They are Ernestina, Ines, Emilia and many other young women who, with their dreams and fragilities, accompany the life of the factory and dedicate their destiny to it. Zaini is a family and, like a family, when Luigi dies prematurely in 1938, it stands beside Olga, who shows such courage and strength she herself is surprised. These are dramatic years, but among the rationing and autarchy, racial laws and bombs on Milan, that will hit Zaini hard as well, this little big company will manage to survive, to cherish the teachings of its founder and to keep on spreading the intense scent of its chocolate on the streets.

Giacinta Cavagna di Gualdana, through the fascinating and particularly humane story of a family and a factory, narrates half a century of the history of Milan, with the watchful eye of the art historian and the eyes of someone who deeply loves their city. An exciting novel on the resilience of women, on their capacity to lead a company and a family, in a period when Italy is going through war and so many dramatic changes.

An incredible story of female entrepreneurship, a compelling novel on the resilience of women, on their capacity to lead a company and a family, in a period when Italy is going through dramatic changes.

The story: Milan, 1923. The novel tells the story of one of the oldest chocolate factories in Milan, where the first blocks (chocolate bars) are wrapped in the workshop in Via De Cristoforis 6, opened by Luigi Zaini. From the 'Fabbrica di cioccolato, cacao, caramelle, confetture e affini' (Factory of chocolate, cocoa, candies, jams and similar) come the first chocolates, the first candies and the very first Boeri, until then imported. The world is greedy and success is quick. Production is constantly growing and space is soon too tight. In the mid-1920s, it was decided to move the factories to Dergano, a few steps away from Carlo Erba and Fernet Branca. In 1924, Luigi, a widower with two children, Piero and Rosetta, marries Olga Torri and soon Vittorio and Elisa are born, and with them arrives Emilia, who from then on helps the family and looks after the children. Emilia has a weakness for sweets: she never misses an opportunity to slip into the kitchen and experiment with some new recipe. The traditional Blocco Emilia, which can still be found on supermarket shelves today, is dedicated to the nanny. Suddenly the founder dies. It is 1938: the winds of war begin to blow heavily. On the death of her husband, Olga, not without worries and concerns, decides to take the reins of the family business and become director. Around her, the historical context becomes increasingly difficult and her choice to surround herself with female collaborators - both at home with the nanny Emilia and the cook Noemi, and in the factory with Ines as head of the commercial department and Clelia in administration, and giving work to many specialised female workers at the machines - will appear even stronger and more countercultural. In fact, the company will be nicknamed 'la fabbrica delle tuse' (in Milanese dialect 'beautiful girls') by all the local residents and not only them. During the Second World War, as the bombing of the city becomes more and more massive, worried for the safety of her family and employees, Olga decided to close the factory and leave the city: overnight she buys a house in Varese, where she will evacuate with her children and her closest employees. Zaini is destroyed, only the main walls remain. Olga does not lose heart and in a few months manages to rebuild everything; the workers leave cocoa and aromas for bricks and cement: it is they who are hired as bricklayers by the construction company, founded for the occasion. The adventure can continue and they start again from the Block, that old recipe - always a secret - that has won over entire generations. Olga runs the company until the mid-1950s when she hands the baton over to her two sons: Vittorio, appointed director, and Piero, in charge of foreign relations: he is "Uncle Piero», who writes the chocolate recipes to be put on the Block Emilia wrapping.

Alfredo and Franco grow up in the 1930s, in a Romagna that smells of countryside and sea, almost unaware of the world in which they find themselves living, amid fascist marches, authoritarian schooling, and the distant echoes of dark threats, in days marked by games, bread and jam, and the voice of a mother urging her family to stay united: “A single branch can break, but not all of them together.” Alfredo and Franco are as different as they are inseparable. One is discreet, quiet, and dreamy; the other is restless, courageous, and rebellious. When war breaks out, their childhood ends, sucked into chaos. Alfredo seems to disappear into thin air, and his brother wants to find him, whatever the cost. Europe is in flames, amid massacres and destruction. Only a feeling of youthful and bold determination can guide Franco in his search for his blood among the blood of so many others.

Milan, 1496. Leonardo da Vinci has been anxiously waiting to meet for the first time friar Luca Pacioli, the renowned mathematician as well as Piero della Francesca's apprentice. While waiting in the scholar's monastery cell, Leonardo lingers over a painting depicting him, stricken by its allegories and its references to Euclidean geometry: each detail must have been chosen by Pacioli himself. To the knowledge-thirsty Leonardo, mathematics, which he had not had the opportunity to learn, had always been the most sublime of all sciences. This was the reason why he had the Franciscan friar invited to Milan by the city's ambassador in Venice: to learn from him. Their encounter, however, is troubled by the murder of Pacioli's cell neighbor: a self-styled priest, but in reality a thief, he had stolen some ancient Byzantine texts arrived in Italy following Sigismondo Pandolfo Malatesta's ruinous crusade in the Morea. Leonardo and Pacioli have a great interest in these books, vanished along with the murderer. They set to finding both, and together begin a journey that will lead them from Milan to Venice, from Florence to Urbino, through an Italy where

THE GIRLS OF ROME IS THE FIRST BOOK IN A TWO-VOLUME SAGA

Giulia and Selene were not just any two girls in first-century BC Rome. The first was the only daughter of Ottaviano Augusto, while the latter was the daughter of Mark Antony and Cleopatra. Ever since Marco Antonio became involved with the Queen of Egypt, he and Ottaviano have been sworn enemies, and in 31 BC Ottaviano triumphs in the Battle of Actium: the dream of the great East fades and Antonio and Cleopatra take their own lives. They are survived by twin children named after the Sun and the Moon, Helios and Selene. Ottaviano spared them, brought them back to Rome, and paraded them in gold chains in the arena of triumph as spoils of war. It was there that little Giulia saw Selene for the first time and was immediately enchanted by her. When Ottaviano decides to be merciful and allow the twins to live in his house on the Palatine Hill, Julia slowly manages to win Selene's friendship, even though their bond will always be marked by what happened between their fathers. The two girls have opposite personalities and complement each other: Selene, with her magnificent green eyes and her mother's charming face, is calm and judicious, while Giulia is instinctive, bold, and capable of rivaling boys. The first volume of a diptych, The Girls of Rome follows the two characters from the ages of ten to seventeen, from their first meeting to their respective marriages, an adolescence spent in a house full of cousins and half-siblings of all ages. Among them are Iullo, Giulia's great impossible love, and Marcello, who is in love with Selene but destined by Ottaviano to marry Giulia. Starting from a meticulous historical reconstruction combined with the novelist's inventiveness, Fontana tells the story of an unbreakable bond, amid contested loves, envy, conflicts, and reconciliations.

IN CHE MODO SONO LEGATE LE SORTI DI UNA GIOVANE BAMBINAIA E DEL ROMANZO PIÙ CELEBRE DELLA STORIA DELLA LETTERATURA ITALIANA?

Per scoprirlo bisogna calarsi in un palazzo nobile della Firenze del 1838, dove quella ragazza di nome Emilia Luti, nubile e orfana di padre, per mantenere la madre e le sorelle minori fa la spola giorno e notte tra la stanza dei bambini e il Gabinetto letterario di casa Vieusseux, nella doppia mansione di bambinaia e aiutante di biblioteca. Quando Massimo d'Azeglio la incontra nel salotto dell'amico rimane colpito dai suoi modi schietti e dal suo fiorentino purissimo e le propone di seguirlo a Milano per occuparsi della piccola Rina, la bambina avuta dalla prima moglie Giulietta, figlia di Alessandro Manzoni. È così che Emilia fa il suo timoroso ingresso nella casa dello scrittore che con i suoi Promessi sposi ha già conquistato il cuore di migliaia di lettori. Il romanzo ha avuto successo, ma lui non è soddisfatto, si è messo in testa di ristamparlo in un'edizione illustrata e di rivederne completamente la lingua, per avvicinarla ancora di più a un fiorentino capace di parlare a tutti, "una lingua che diventi la lingua degli italiani". Quasi per scherzo, sottopone a Emilia qualche frase, e impressionato dalle sue osservazioni comincia a mandarle dei bigliettini per chiederle aiuto. I due finiranno per rileggere e correggere insieme l'intero romanzo, tra lo studio di Milano e la villa di campagna a Brusuglio, circondati e spesso distratti dalle vicissitudini dell'ingombrante famiglia Manzoni. Capitolo dopo capitolo, fiorirà tra loro la confidenza che nasce quando si cammina insieme in quel luogo spaventoso e pieno di meraviglia che sono le parole di uno scrittore. Don Alessandro rivelerà a Emilia le sue paure, e a sua volta Emilia si aprirà con lui fino a raccontargli il suo più grande segreto. Prendendo le mosse da una storia vera rimasta finora nell'ombra e attingendo dalla corrispondenza tra il Manzoni e la Luti e da materiali inediti emersi dalle sue ricerche, Emanuela Fontana traccia un ritratto profondamente umano dello scrittore più idealizzato di tutti i tempi e trasforma Emilia in un grande personaggio letterario, sagace e libero, rendendo così giustizia al contributo dato da una giovane donna al romanzo più famoso di sempre, nella versione che tutti noi abbiamo letto e studiato.

The search for air was my need in those days, and I immediately perceived it, air, listening again to Vivaldi's music: vortices, winds, an infinite desire for breath and freedom.

Venice, 1688. We are in the workshop of Giambattista Vivaldi, who, in order to support his five children, takes care of the beards and hair of the lords of the Serenissima and occasionally entertains them with the violin, his true passion. Antonio, hair as red as fire, is ten years old and a very fragile child, he is always short of air and his heart runs much faster than his legs. Suddenly, the young Vivaldi finds his father's violin in his hands and, without ever having touched it before, improvises a furious melody that enraptures everyone present, including the young Alessandro and Benedetto Marcello, destined to become his lifelong friends and rivals. From that moment on, Antonio will never again separate himself from his violin, not even when, shortly afterwards, he is forced by his family to take the path of the priesthood. But while saying mass fatigues him and causes him respiratory crises, music soon becomes his air. And when he tires of playing other people's, he will begin to compose his own, with the fervour and haste of someone who writes each piece of music as if it were his last. A fragile genius full of contrasts, generous with the last but also eager for fame and glory, he will teach singing to the orphans of Venice and frequent sumptuous courts, compose sacred music but also enormously successful concerts and dozens of operas, which he will personally stage in theatres across half of Europe. It was at the height of his brightest summer that, among the servants of the court of Mantua, he met the only important woman in his life, the very young Anna Girò, with whose voice and talent he fell so much in love that he launched her into a career as a singer. A spiritual and creative partnership that will cause gossip and scandal, but will also inspire some of the most immortal concerts in history, including The Four Seasons.

Emanuela Fontana tells us about this ethereal and impossible love, this incessant dance of chasing and estrangement, with delicate and empathetic writing. And, through a series of portentous fictional inventions and an alternation of temporal planes, which give rhythm and visual power to the page, she succeeds in giving us back all of Antonio's souls: the shy child with fiery hair, the rebellious and extravagant young man, the ambitious composer and finally the lonely old man, forgotten by all, who, on the snowy streets of Vienna, in the company of a brilliant little pupil, tries to sell his music for a few coins. These are the seasons of one exceptional life, never before narrated in novel form.

Vita fragile e libera di Antonio Vivaldi*, the first novel to reconstruct the life of the brilliant composer of the Four Seasons. In 2023 she published with Mondadori, La corretrice, the true story of Alessandro Manzoni's secret editor.

ROME, 294 A.D. Petra is just a child when she finds in an old dusty box, a silver coin with the effigy of her mother. She still doesn't know that in the past she was the greatest queen of the East, the only one who defied the Roman Empire... Cultured, charming and brave Zenobia, queen of Palmyra, a flourishing city that stood at the centre of an oasis in the Syrian desert, meeting place of the caravans coming from the Far East, through Arabia and the Mediterranean. Together with the importance of Palmyra, the queen's ambition grew every day: after the death of her husband, the Roman general Odaenathus, Zenobia claimed her descent from Dido to Cleopatra and proclaimed herself as Empress Augusta. But the government of a small outpost of the Empire was not enough. She was an ally of Rome, the only bulwark against the expansion of the Persians and after few years she became the main rival of the Empire, launching to the conquest of all Eastern territories. But she had in mind just an idea: command the East as well as the Emperor Gallienus commanded the West. The efforts of the Romans were worthless, to the invasion of the Goths, against Zenobia and her army. At least until many years later, the Emperor Aurelian did not start a real fight for the re-conquest...

THE NOVEL PURSUES THE INTIMATE REASONS OF THE GENIUS AND THE GENESIS OF MANY OF GUSTAVE CAILLEBOTTE'S MASTERPIECES, INVESTIGATING THE COMPLEX DYNAMICS OF THE RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN THE ARTIST AND HIS BELOVED.

Before wondering who might have been that man, before questioning on the smell of his breath, before even discovering, desiring his caresses, Gustave Caillebotte wondered what it would have been like to paint him.

The night falls like an axe over the pointed roofs, over the trafficked boulevards, over the crowded cafes, over the theatres in a festive mood that begin to celebrate the cult of the Belle Époque, greeting the new and contradictory era of Baron Haussmann.

A man crosses the closed city in a wintry, metaphysical silence, which appears identical in his own paintings.

This man is Gustave Caillebotte, painter, collectors, gardeners, athlete, naval architect and designer of sailing ships, but above all one of the richest patrons that chose to dedicate their fortune to the expressive movement, which radically changed the shape of the modern art: The Impressionism.

It all started in Paris in 1863, Gustave Caillebotte is still a young boy when, in the living room of his rich family's house, hears about the exhibitions of Refusés painters and especially about the work of a certain Édouard Manet. The vision of that portrait Le déjeuner sur l'herbe, to which he comes close secretly, and moved by an obscure hunger, marks the birth of an opposed passion that will burn up inside him to the point of devouring his own soul, pervading the days of his short life. Gustave disobeys paternal directives, animated by the desire of learning to paint, and obtains those unusual features, so new; colour experiments which are considered as authentic insults to the tradition and that indicates the origin of a rebellion: the movement which will be later defined as "Impressionism".

A similar passion, in the eyes of his father Martial, severe man but not uncaring, cannot fail to be an entertainment. For his mother Céleste, troubled and complex creature, something not appropriate for a man.

The conflict between the inner sensitivity of the painter and the role which the bourgeois society of that period requires, will cross like a jagged red wire the entire young Caillebotte's life, nourishing his art and the love of male bodies, object of many of his most beautiful canvases.

This dispute between his own secret desires and external constraints sneaks in every brushstrokes, making his work intense and most modern.

However, the Gustave Caillebotte's parable contains even more: in addition to project ships, he was one of the most important collectors of his period, the generous patron of immense artists like Monet, Renoir, Degas, Morisot and many others, which owe him even more than what the official culture passed on. And here he is, enclosed in the beautiful pages of Luigi La Rosa where we see flowing his story, a suffered and touching epic, which is already a novel.

The novel pursues the intimate reasons of the genius and the genesis of many of his masterpieces, investigating the complex dynamics of the relationships between the artist and his beloved.

From the dreamy seasons of the country life in Yerres until the tumultuous and revolutionary ones in Paris, from the burning days of the Commune to the definitive ones of Petit-Gennevilliers, in the rural property where the artist will find refuge. The private drama will produce humours and resonances, turning into a rich and passionate domestic saga.

All around, the tremble of a century in riot dipped in the blood of its rebellions and projected towards the horizon of change.

To lead us to the pages will be the sentimental epic of this creator of beauty and his incurable loneliness, an extraordinary being that in forty-six years of life never stopped to follow love, the carnal desire for boys that very often appears in his portraits, rowers, "flâneur" and "raboteur of parquet" for which Caillebotte owes his myth - the hunger of tenderness that art never managed to extinguish but by contrast has been able to sublimate and surrender to the eternity.

Luigi La Rosa was born in Messina in 1974, journalist and writer, recently divided between Italy and Paris. Professor of creative writing, he edited the volumes Thoughts for Christmas, Erotic Thoughts, The Year That Will Come and The Alphabet of Love for Rizzoli-Bur.

One of his tales is the anthology What is Between Us- Homosexual Love Stories (Manni).

He is author of Only in Paris and anywhere else - a sentimental guide and That Name is Love-artist's itineraries in Paris, edited both by "Ad Est Dell'Equatore".

He edited literary and artistic sections of the last green guide of Paris for Touring Club. The Man Without Winter. Story Of A Forgotten Genius Of Impressionism is his debut novel.

AN EVOCATIVE AND FASCINATING TALE ABOUT ONE OF THE MASTERS OF ITALIAN OPERA. A SUPERBLY CONCEIVED STORY TO EXPLORE THE MAN AND THE GENIUS BEHIND THE FIGURE OF VINCENZO BELLINI.

December 26, 1831. The debut of Norma on the stage of La Scala in Milan marks both the creative peak of Vincenzo Bellini's music and a terrible fiasco, that pushes the Sicilian to flee the theater in chaos and wander about in a cold city. A man is following him, impeccable in his elegance but distant and haughty in his bearing; a figure who, enveloped in a cloud of mystery, appears throughout the musician's life - an existence that resembles a novel, and that the pages portray in the light of an inexhaustible and all-consuming passion. From his childhood in Catania with few resources, to the difficult years of his education in Naples, and then the debut in the opera, the traveling, the fame, his moving to Milan and the excesses, the legendary repertoire of unhappy love affairs. One with the young Maddalena, daughter of judge Fumaroli. The dangerous and controversial liaison with Giuditta Cantù. The subtle seductions of Giuditta Pasta. The ethereal and unfulfilled desire for Maria Malibran, absolute diva and sublime interpreter, in the London season of the composer. And then Paris, the onset of his illness and his early death, the romantic solitude of the genius and the enigma of the dark admirer who finally opens up his vault of secrets, unraveling the plot of the narration. Tiles of a fascinating mosaic and the story of a universe - that of Italian melodrama - that the author's pen transforms into a formidable adventure, between precise historical reconstruction and fiction, faithful to the limpid truths of his biography, as well as to the betrayals of invention. "Bellini rewrote, but with a stubbornness that he had shown just a handful of times. Norma, only that name would appear. He would never accept to call the magnificent and lunar face any other way, the face that, like Narcissus over the murderous pool of water, he already saw emerging from the untouched musical staff."

Luigi La Rosa was born in Messina in 1974, and lives between Italy and Paris. He collaborates with newspapers and magazines, teaches creative writing, and for Rizzoli-Bur he curated the volumes Pensieri di Natale ("Christmas thoughts"), Pensieri Erotici ("Erotic thoughts"), L'anno che verrà ("The year that's about to come") and L'alfabeto dell'amore ("The alphabet of love"). One of his short stories appeared in the collection Quello che c'è tra di noi - storie d'amore omosessuale ("What's between us - stories of homosexual love"), Manni Editori. He is the author of Solo a Parigi e non altrove - una guida sentimentale ("Only in Paris and not elsewhere - a sentimental guide") and Quel nome è amore ("That name is love"). For Touring Club he curated the literary and artistic section of the latest green guide to Paris. His previous novel L'uomo senza inverno ("The man without winter") a novel dedicated to Gustave Caillebotte (2020) has been published by Piemme in 2020.

ADALINA TRAVELS ON AN OLD TRAIN TO RETURN HOME. THE GREAT WAR TOOK HER PARENTS AWAY AND LEFT HER HOMELAND, SOUTH TYROL, UNRECOGNISABLE: THE BORDERS AND LANGUAGE HAVE CHANGED, THE MOUNTAINS AND FORESTS HAVE BEEN TORN APART BY BOMBING. THE TIME HAS COME TO START OVER, TO HEAL THE WOUNDS OF BODY AND SOUL, WHILE WAITING FOR HER BROTHER EMILIANO TO RETURN HOME.

A RAW AND POETIC DEBUT NOVEL. A TIME TO DIE AND A TIME TO HEAL. A CONTESTED LAND TORN BETWEEN FRAGILE BORDERS AND THE DESIRE TO BELONG.

AN EXTRAORDINARY STORY OF FEMALE REDEMPTION, DEEPLY INTERTWINED WITH THE INTENSITY AND STRENGTH OF THE MOUNTAINS.

“Seven times forest, seven times meadow”: this was the prophecy they lived by. Life, in short, was a circle. Everything, in the end, returned to how it had been, and nothing they had owed to them. Everything changed, went through phases and seasons, returned to how it had been and started again. Perhaps things would start again for Adalina too, now that she was back at the mäs.

Adalina is alone. She has been travelling on that old, creaking train for two days. She has no one beside her to hold, comfort or feed. She only has a suitcase clutched between her legs, made of a bit of wood and cardboard that has almost melted in the storm. She is returning from Mitterndorf, the refugee camp for the inhabitants of South Tyrol, which was incorporated into the front line of the Great War, where she spent the last terrible year and lost her parents, who died of exhaustion and grief. In the camp, during the harsh days broken only by work at the shoe factory, and during the long nights crushed between the bodies of other desperate people, only two thoughts kept her alive: her mäs, the farmstead that had been passed down through her family for generations, and Emiliano, her brother who had left to fight for an empire that had crumbled like a loaf of bread, the brother she had not heard from in months and who was now the only one left to call her by the name she loved: Lina. Back home, Lina realises that not only her family, borders and language have changed: the mountains and woods are no longer the same, torn apart by bombing, plundered and stripped bare. The farmhouse has partly collapsed and been blackened by fires set by squatters. But it is still standing. Adalina knows that life is made up of sad winters as well as lush springs, and now is the time to start over, to heal the wounds of the body and soul. This is also true for Emiliano, who will return from the war and must not think that Lina has ever given up. Until one day, something changes in her hard-won daily life. A young man has sneaked into the farmhouse: he is a soldier, like Emiliano; he speaks German, the real one. And, just like Emiliano, he too is now on the wrong side of the border.

“Writing about mountains has become a well-represented ‘subgenre’ in bookshops, but one in which it is difficult to avoid clichés. Some manage to do so, as Caterina Manfrini's debut novel, Sette volte bosco. A novel that brings back to the present a largely forgotten episode dating back to the First World War: the great deportation, decided by the Austro-Hungarian Empire, to remove its Trentino subjects from the border area.

A journey between memory and hope, in an evocative debut novel.

Il Venerdi

Here, the mountain emerges, a “real” mountain, with its lyricism and tragedy, with its popular nakedness, as in the pages on Mount Pasubio ravaged by war, or in those on the market where goods are exchanged in kind. Bending down with careful research on the ignored tragedy of the Trentino populations thus becomes, on the one hand, a gesture of pity but also, on the other, of conscious restitution, ultimately of belonging.

Mario Baudino - EN Il Libraio

A first time to frame. Because making your debut with a novel, at a historic publishing house, when you are not even thirty years old, is not for everyone. Caterina Manfrini succeeded. Carlo

Martinelli – Il T

Such a strong and powerful bond with the place, traditions and language are the elements that make this literary debut worth reading.

Il Piccolo

Caterina Manfrini was born in Rovereto in 1996. She studied anthropology in Denmark and Bologna. Her passion for stories led her to London, where she obtained a master's degree in Creative Writing. Sette volte bosco is her debut novel.

THE LAST GAME NARRATES THE HOLOCAUST - AND A LOT MORE - FROM THE POINT OF VIEW OF AN INVOLUNTARY HERO, AND DEPICTS THE ALL-ROUND PORTRAIT OF A MAN WHO IS FULL OF CONTRADICTIONS, REMORSE, AMBIGUITY AND A NEVER-ENDING WILL TO LIVE. AN EXCEPTIONAL AND EMBLEMATIC SERIES OF EVENTS THAT SHOW THE READER HOW IT IS STORIES THAT MAKE HISTORY.

"He had to write about Auschwitz. To relive his own memories. To win the last game."

How did I survive? Alojzy "Alex" Ehrlich asks himself while staring at his old typewriter. It's the first of January 1991, the day of his seventy-sixth birthday. Forty-six have gone by since he, Jewish, table tennis world runner-up, came out of the hell of Auschwitz and escaped the death march. He knows he doesn't have long to live, and the time has come for him to tell his story. So he starts writing: his militancy in the resistance, the arrest in June of 1944, the tortures, the trip in the locked wagon, the concentration camp. He's not like the other prisoners. The Nazi guards know he is a sports champion and assign him to a kommando with a special task: to defuse unexploded bombs. And while he is reliving the hell of the lagers, his memory returns to his childhood in Lviv, to the love that filled his whole existence, to the betrayals, the lies, the ambiguities of his life with a frankness that at times is cruel, coming to reflect on the victim-perpetrator relationship with a known SS official who seemed to enjoy putting him sadistically to the test.

Pedemonte is really good, he narrates with the modesty of the most cumbersome things, the instinct for survival, violence, the inhuman of strength and domination, overwhelm in order not to be overwhelmed, ridiculous pity ("Mercy no longer exists, it's a ridiculous concept like the word tolerance inside the extermination camps. "). And he also tells how ping pong taught Ehrlich to play his most important game, the last one - the one with memory." Il

Venerdì di Repubblica

A beautiful and touching novel. Pedemonte reconstructs the story of the table tennis champion, Aloyzj Ehrlich, forced, at the age of thirty, to fight for his survival, in a final challenge in the extermination camp of Auschwitz. A light narrative, taken from the unpublished diary of the athlete, who had given it before he died in 1992, to his friend and international table tennis manager Arnaldo Morino.” Avvenire

"It was as if an invisible way showed him the path to a distant yet near world, arcane and unimaginable but present. A silent voice told him that he was on the right path and that soon the power of the pomegranate would be in his hands. "

1473. A series of heinous murders sheds blood at the court of Pope Sixtus IV. What mystery is the greatest work of art of all times hiding? The mystery of the Sistine Chapel told in a magnificent and fascinating historical setting, that allows the readers to dive into the political and artistic life of the Renaissance, giving them the opportunity of a close encounter with its protagonists.

Rome, 1473. In the shadow of high palaces and centuries-old basilicas, Pope Sixtus IV has only one obsession: to reproduce Solomon's ancient Temple in the Eternal City, in order to bring the Church of Rome back to its ancient splendor. Thus the grandiose project of the Sistine Chapel takes shape, that has in fact the same dimensions as the Temple in Jerusalem. But to carry out his plan, he needs a symbol of power that has been lost in time and myth: the ivory pomegranate decorating the scepter of the High Priest. While in the Vatican, amid intrigues of court and thirst for power, a mysterious hand commits heinous murders in the shadow of the Sistine, the pontiff appoints the young monk Moses to find the precious relic. However, things don't go as planned. The search will prove to be increasingly insidious and will take Moses far from Rome, beyond the borders of good and evil, on a journey that from the Palace of the Hospitallers in Rhodes passes through the lodgings in Cyprus and even penetrates the walls of Otranto besieged by the Turks. Back from the long trip, his life will be changed forever, and with it also the story of the most famous Chapel of all times.

“We immediately fell in love with Clementina, a very strong, interesting and contemporary female figure, utopian and perhaps even proto-feminist, but ‘from the gut’. A character who is not to be forgotten and who could rightly be one of Chiara Tagliaferri and Michela Murgia's Morgane.” (Angela Rastelli and Dalia Oggero, Einaudi Editore)

“Giuliana Salvi tells in novel form the story of her great-grandmother, who founded a home school in Lecce at the beginning of the 20th century. And invented a method. (...) There are many ways to make a revolution without going to the barricades, and Clementina achieves her own by creating a fertile pedagogy.” Leonetta Bentivoglio, La Repubblica.

“History teaches us that underestimating a woman is cowardly as well as foolish’: it was 1925 and Clementina Salvi had set up a public school in her home in Lecce, where, over the next twenty years, she would educate dozens of children. Her personal history had brought her face to face with the sudden death of her husband, three children to support, a life to rebuild in that Salento from which she had left and then forcibly returned.

Was she a feminist?

‘She was one in deeds, not in claims, for which she had no time. The figure I have tried to bring to life in the novel is not that of a heroine: Clementina was rough, complicated, as a mother at times castrating. But also challenging, attentive. Getting respect from the teenagers she was surrounded by was not easy, but she put so much faith and passion into her teaching that those around her were overwhelmed by it’.” Interview to the author, Il Venerdì di Repubblica

While History rages outside the window, Clementina, a young widow with three children has to reinvent the world. Sitting at the desk that was her father's and make ends meet, so as not to disappoint either the living or the dead. And so, utopian and feminist at heart, Clementina sets up, within the walls of her home, a school improvised and different from all the others, changing the destiny of dozens of boys and girls in a Lecce that, in the first half of the 20th century seems on the periphery of everything. Inspired by the true story of the author's great-grandmother, Clementina is a novel that is not to be forgotten, thanks the strength of an extremely contemporary female character contemporary: a woman ‘all gestures’, alive charismatic, restless, always in search of something, ready to escape the confines of family memory and to inhabit our own.

THE NOVEL ABOUT EDGARDO MORTARA STORY

MARCO BELLOCCHIO'S LATEST MOVIE, KIDNAPPED, IT'S BASED ON "EDGARDO MORTARA CASE" BY DANIELE SCALISE. IT TELLS THE STORY OF EDGARDO MORTARA, A JEWISH CHILD KIDNAPPED BY THE POPE (BOLOGNA, ITALY, 1858) BECAUSE HE WAS SECRETLY BAPTIZED AT THE

AGE OF 7 FROM HIS HOUSEKEEPER. HE WAS LATER EDUCATED BY THE POPE TO THE CATHOLIC FAITH TO BECOME A PRIEST.

THE RELEASE OF THE MOVIE IS EXPECTED BY 25th MAY 2023

"FOR THE FIRST TIME HE WONDERED IF ALL THAT TRAVELING AROUND THE WORLD WOULD LEAD HIM TO FIND A PLACE UNDER THIS SKY. THAT IS, IF THAT PLACE REALLY EXISTED SOMEWHERE AND WAS REACHABLE."

"At the Catechumens and then again in the college at San Pietro in Vincoli, I was told but not explained, that for my own good I had to remain separated from my parents, that God had chosen that twisted path and I had a duty to obey His high will.

First I despaired but then I resigned myself. Or so I believed. Some said that I was showing signs of decompensation, that I was impatient and impatient. A way of saying I was crazy. If there were those who thought me undeserving, there were others who suspected that I was lying and ready to deny grace. Everyone always had an opinion about me without ever asking mine.

When I turned fourteen, Pius IX felt the time had come for me to know from his voice how I had become a Christian. He told me of the sacrament received in swaddling clothes, of the illness remitted, of the servant girl who had been an instrument of salvation and rebirth. I did not seem to hear about myself. No one cared if I suffered or how much or if I was certain of my belonging to Holy Mother Church. I would have answered loyally: of course I was certain that I belonged to Christ's people, but this had never dulled, not even for a moment, the pain that oppressed me."

Bologna June 23, 1958. Two papal guards show up at the door of Momolo and Marianna Mortara with a warrant from the Holy Inquisition. From that moment the existence of a family of modest Jewish merchants is destined to be forever disrupted: the guards are in fact ordered to take away the sixth of their children, Edgardo, not yet seven years old. The astonished parents ask in vain for explanations, protest, and despair, but in the end they are forced to yield to the gendarmes who drag their little son away. It is the brutal beginning of an increasingly bloody affair destined to punctuate badly the history of the nascent Italian state and the now fatal extinction of the papal one. Appeals to the pope by heads of state such as Napoleon III were to no avail. Emperor of Austria and the president of the United States, nor the voices of protest from men of culture and the pleas of those of all faiths. Pius IX is irreducible: Edgardo Mortara, though born Jewish, belongs to the Catholic Church since a nursemaid swore she secretly baptized him when he was in the cradle believing he was dying from a fever attack. A victim of a stormy era Edgardo will live his entire life within the ecclesiastical institution, first a confused and lonely boy, then a restless and desperate priest. Until his death in a convent near Liege three months before the Nazis invade in Belgium, he will be an innocent pawn on the chessboard of ruthless power.

Daniele Scalise, author of the essay Il caso Mortara. La vera storia del bambino ebreo rapito dal papa (Mondadori in 1997-2023), is considered one of the leading expert about this incredible true story. For 5 years Daniele Scalise has investigated in Vatican Secret Archives and has researched in the monasteries where Edgardo Mortara lived, finding his secret diaries and many important documents. The novel is based on this unique documentation: A place beneath this sky, after a fierce auction with five Italian publishers, will be released by Longanesi in May 2023.

Daniele Scalise, writer and journalist, has worked for RAI as director and programmer, and for Quotidiani Associati as war zones correspondent.

In his writing, he has committed racial and sexual discrimination (antisemitism and homophobia). Lettera di un padre omosessuale alla figlia (Rizzoli, 2008) is a letter to explain his homosexuality to his daughter. The essay Il caso Mortara. (Mondadori, 1997-2023) is the book on which is inspired the latest movie by Marco Bellocchio Rapito (25th May 2023).

A MASTERFUL FICTIONAL BIOGRAPHY OF THE ASTRONOMER EDMUND HALLEY

The short traveller* unfolds like a meditation on the instability of knowledge and the fragile greatness of human questioning

«Gennaro Serio turns fiction into truth and truth into fiction. He enjoys himself and entertains us. He can do anything.» Piergiorgio Paterlini, Robinson

There are those who travel the world in search of answers and those who, like Edmund Halley, the discoverer of the famous comet, question it out of a pure desire to observe. In the 17th century, a time of discoveries and catastrophes, amid unknown skies and turbulent seas, a young astronomer ventures into the southern hemisphere in search of invisible constellations and mysterious magnetic variations, embarking on the first journey in history undertaken for purely scientific reasons. With a light yet rigorous narrative style, Gennaro Serio reinvents the figure of Halley amid failed experiments, brilliant insights, and lost landscapes.

«One with a voice like that makes all the difference.»
Paolo di Paolo - Venerdì di Repubblica

«I listened to the bewitching music of Gennaro Serio with great respect and true gratitude on behalf of the neglected companion Literature.» Sandra Petrigiani

PRESS REVIEW OF HIS DEBUT NOVEL

«A detective story in its own right [...] that contrasts the increasingly consumerist levels of the genre with a novel of great pleasure and enjoyment, refined structure and writing.»
Ermanno Paccagnini, La Lettura

«Truly a happy pen that of Gennaro Serio. Like his hyper detective, inside he is just everyone else, he is a reckless troublemaker who constructs a literary detective story, a disruptive and, at times, impertinent adventure novel. With a broad, happily disrespectful style, as happens only to talented young people or great old men.»

Marcello Fois, Tuttolibri

«It is not often that one comes across a debut of such surprising and in some ways disarming quality, when referring to an author who is barely thirty years old, and yet shows an already defined physiognomy and, in the meantime, a complete mastery of his own linguistic-stylistic means.»

Massimo Raffaeli, Alias

«A funambulistic, free, experimental, very brave work [...], a personal tribute to literariness and a labyrinth of stories in which one has the pleasure of getting lost, without wanting to get out.»

La Repubblica

Gennaro Serio was born in Naples in 1989. He lives between Athens, Rome, and Paris and works for the editorial staff of the cultural weekly Alias, published by Il Manifesto. He has already published Notturmo di Gibilterra (2020), his first novel, winner of the Italo Calvino Prize, and Ludmilla e il corvo (2023) by L'orma editore, confirming his status as one of the most surprising storytellers of recent years.

“He closes his eyes, stunned and overwhelmed. When he opens them again, in front of him he sees the light of two other eyes, yellow: the eyes of a she-wolf with a silvery coat, hiding in the middle of the bush. They are as bright as onyx. They stare at him for a long moment, then turn upwards. Romulus cannot help but follow them, and turns towards the sky above them both. There, he sees them: griffins are flying over the top of the hill, coming from the east and heading west. He hears the exultant cries of Proculus and Celer, who call to him from the hill and exult at the sighting. He quickly counts the birds: two, four, six, eight, twelve. Twelve griffins with majestic open wings, circling above Palation. His eyes wet with tears again, but this time they are tears of joy. Twelve griffins. Twelve. Six more than Remus. He is the chosen one of the gods.”

Two infant twins are abandoned by two men of Amulius, brother of the now weak king Numitor and de facto ruler of the Albans, near the mouth of the Tiber, in an uninhabited area called Ruma. They are children of guilt: their father is unknown, while their mother, Rea Silvia, princess of Alba Longa, was destined to become a priestess of the Goddess before she broke her vows of chastity. Now she is condemned to death, as are the children she bore. But fate has a different plan for them, and one of the two soldiers leads them to safety...

Romulus and Remus are considered brigands and are hunted throughout the region by Amulius' men. When Remus falls into a trap and is captured, Romulus enters the city, and the revelation of their origins to King Numitor changes everything. But again, fate is more complicated than it seems and has planned something greater for them than ruling over the small Alba Longa: the founding of a city that will become the centre of the world in the very place where they were abandoned, Ruma. The project, however, will put the twins' bond to the test: Romulus will be willing to do the unthinkable in order to become the founder of the new city...

The Prolog To Mortals

Everything you think you know about me is false.

Every image. Every idea. Every word.

I know what goes on in your heads when you hear my name.

The goddess of love. And away we go, a deluge of statues, and paintings, in which there is me, portrayed without veils. As I am born from a seashell, in the middle of the sea, or, more bourgeoisly, bathing surrounded by jugs and incense burners of perfume, drying my hair, wearing a peplos that slips off me, leaving me almost naked, or completely naked. And then lying on soft beds, holding the apple of victory after defeating my rivals, or seated on thrones, or driving chariots drawn by doves, with a surround of funny winged cupids to keep me company.

Aphrodite the beautiful: for you I am always smiling, elegant, glossy. A magazine cover goddess, a chic goddess, the forerunner of all the trophy wives dressed by fashionable designers, of the glamorous actresses and supermodels who parade down the catwalks swathed in glittering gowns, their hair in order, their make-up perfect. The goddess of love and desire, but a homologated desire, a product of your world, banal, predictable like all mass-produced things: domesticated.

A goddess who does not live, does not act, does not create: she decorates a world of males, designed for them.

At most she arouses some juicy gossip for her licentious conduct, when she takes younger, handsome and not particularly sharp-eyed lovers for mates, or attracts the scorn of moralists because she protects adulterous heroines, and even prostitutes. But basically, an inoffensive, superficial, unimaginative panderer for the languid couplings of romance novels or inspirer of some spicier adventure, fit to be whispered about in alcoves.

To this you have reduced me, ungrateful mortals.

You have no idea who I am.

You have forgotten me. You have debased me, belittled me, mutilated me. You have reduced a primordial force of the cosmos to a fairy tale fit for your homes, your little world of pre-packaged talk and sentiment.

You have no idea who I really am.

It is time and time for someone to remind you.

In a long monologue, the goddess Aphrodite confesses by telling her story. Which is not the one we are all used to knowing.

Aphrodite is considered the goddess of falling in love and of love itself, a graceful and 'light' presence on Olympus, the trophy wife of Hephaestus, the protector of Paris, the somewhat bungling mother of Aeneas, who accompanies handsome young men and basically decorates Olympus with her loveliness.

In reality, the goddess is the most powerful force of nature, the one that allows the cosmos to exist and remain united. If, over the centuries, Western culture has forgotten her true role, it is due to the Greeks' reworking of her archaic and powerful figure and the patriarchal culture that has attempted to erase all traces of her.

Aphrodite's monologue aims precisely at exposing their lies and explaining the real story, with a distinctly feminist vein.

The Greeks themselves before Homer knew well that she was not included in the genealogies of the Olympians, but was born directly from the blood of Uranus. Born in the East as Ishtar or Astarte, heiress of the great Neolithic mother goddesses, goddesses of everything, Aphrodite is recounted by the Greeks who adopt her into their Pantheon, but cohabitation is immediately difficult.

Her habits and nature conflict with the patriarchal 'rules' of the Olympians, and so the Greeks rewrite her myths trying to limit her influence in human affairs. Aphrodite hates Homer and the mythographers and now wants justice and recognition. It is a feminist Aphrodite, terribly angry and fed up with millennia of lies about her that will be told.

Her first disappointment is the death of Adonis. The young man is her favourite, but their story is not that of a cheap romance between a cougar and a toyboy from mythology. Adonis is not so much a lover as a son of the goddess, representing the vigour of vegetation and spring, born of Aphrodite herself and living in symbiosis with her. He has many names: Tammuz, Damuzi, in the East, even Dionysus.

The myth is distorted by the Greeks who do not tolerate a male subordinate to a goddess. Thus Adonis is recounted as a foiled youth. His role in the myth is given to Persephone, who is abducted by Hades and is a woman, so she can be told as weak and submissive to another woman, her mother Demeter.

Adonis, on the other hand, is made to die and Aphrodite has to go to pity Persephone, who then has him killed by Ares.

Another reworked story is that of her marriage. According to the Vulgate, Zeus at one point forces Aphrodite to marry Hephaestus, because her beauty and freedom are considered disturbing even on Olympus. Aphrodite does not love her husband, even though she ultimately esteems him. But her nature does not allow her to be faithful and in fact she betrays him with Ares, whom she does not esteem at all. Hephaestus discovers this and imprisons the lovers in a golden spider web and shows them off to Olympus all in mockery. Aphrodite, enraged, leaves him and he marries Aglaia, one of the Graces, who is a goddess of beauty and that's all, almost an Aphrodite dimidiata. In reality, Aphrodite and Hephaestus have been a couple since Minoan Crete, when they supervised the light and smelting of metals. Hephaestus was one of her many co-partners, so intelligent that he was not jealous because he was aware that he was the spouse of a very powerful and inarguable force of nature that made him alive and active too.

But the real affront to Aphrodite takes place in the myths concerning the Trojan War. Here, first Aphrodite is portrayed as a wench competing with Athena and Hera for the apple of Eris, then as a schemer who promises

Helen to Paris despite the fact that she is already married to Menelaus, and thus recklessly causes the Trojan War.

The reality is quite different. Helen and Aphrodite have a long-standing bond; Helen herself is originally a minor goddess in Aphrodite's court, linked to the cult of trees and the story of Adonis. Aphrodite is the protector of a couple that defies the laws of patriarchal society and does not accept the rules.

During the war, Aphrodite cares for the Trojans and fights by their side, even though Homer reduces her role to a vain one and has her injured in the war: she, the warrior goddess of the East, is beaten by Diomedes and scolded by Zeus!

He makes her out to be an overprotective mother, just as he tells her affair with Anchises as the story of a little man who boasts of having seduced a goddess.

In reality, Aphrodite engages in a long struggle against Fate itself in Troy, trying to save a city that the Greeks want to condemn.

In the aftermath of the fall, she is left with her son Aeneas. Aphrodite hates Homer and instead loves Virgil, who has been able to recount her heartbreak as goddess and mother. And she loves the Romans, whom she considers her avengers. She intervenes in the affairs of her son, whom she loves because he is not a 'Homeric' hero, but is much less 'toxic', much more fragile and multifaceted, although unfortunately she realises that he does not have sufficient character to subvert the patriarchal system in which he is immersed, and therefore in the end does not have the courage to disobey Zeus.

He tries to set him up with Dido, here again fighting against fate, because he would like to have him united with a woman of character, and not with the washed-up Lavinia who instead is functional to the patriarchal world order. He will not succeed and so he will help him settle in Latium, waiting for the gens Julia to be born from that land of hard peasants, with Caesar, one of his favourites, with the tough women of his descendants and with the Roman women, who, unlike the Greek women, will really be his daughters and despite a thousand difficulties will often hold up the empire more and better than the men.

And now, in the contemporary era, Aphrodite awaits her redemption, for she sees in the women of today her true daughters, ready to rise up and take their rightful place in the world.

524 A.D. In Pavia, a group of armed Goths is sent to arrest Boethius, philosopher and minister of Theodoric. He is accused of plotting with Justinian and the Byzantines to overthrow Theodoric the Great, king of the Goths and Lord of Italy.

Meanwhile in Constantinople inside the Cathedral of Hagia Sophia, a merchant belonging to the Green faction is killed. Prefect Theodotus is determined to find the culprit and the principal suspect is Theodosius Zicca, a young man protected by Theodora. Theodora has not yet managed to be married by Justinian: at court, her past earned her the hatred of Empress Euphemia, wife of Justin. But Euphemia sadly falls ill and Theodora hopes that her disappearance will turn the tide. Justinian is called to her bedside, but unfortunately contracts the same disease of Euphemia and falls victim to a fever that makes people worried about his life. The prefect Theodotus (who hates Theodora) seizes an opportunity and shows up before Justin, accusing her of covering up the killer. So he has Theodora's house searched and Zicca arrested, who is sentenced to death. Theodora has no longer news of Justinian and fears she has been left behind. So together with friends Cyril and Antonina, who is the wife of Belisarius, a young court guard, entered in the Justinian's apartments to visit him. The lover reassures her that he resisted to the pressure to leave her, but in the meantime Justin arrives and he is furious because Theodora has managed to break into the Palace. At this point Justinian says he has no intention of leaving Theodora, even with the risk of dying in mortal sin, and Justin, still hardly hit by the death of his wife Euphemia, is moved and decides that he will allow the two to get married.

The Prefect Theodotus is summoned by Justinian and arrested for plotting against his superiors. Meanwhile, Peter, Justin's secretary, informs Justinian that the Pope want to come on an official visit to Constantinople to ask that an edict of Justin would be revoked, which prevents Aryans from practicing their religion. The Pope is sent by Theodoric, who is Aryan, but his coming compromises the complex religious balance of the court. Moreover, Peter adds, Theodoric considers Justinian involved in the conspiracy for which Boethius is accused.

The action moves to Africa, again in 524, in the heart of a battle. Amalafrida, the sister of Theodoric, is the widow of her husband Thrasamund, Aryan and king of the Vandals, and rebelled against his nephew Hilderic, the new king who is catholic and wants to apply the edict of Justin and ally with Justinian. The queen unleashes a battle with the support of the Moorish knights, but she is captured and the Goths guards are killed.

News of the capture of Amalafrida arrives in Ravenna. Theodoric is old and sick and his court split into two factions, one formed by the Romans who are loyal to Byzantium and the other one by the Goths. Cyprian and Trigvila are at the head of the Filogota faction, while the new magister officiorum Cassiodorus is their enemy. Amalasunta, daughter of Theodoric and mother of the heir to the throne, the little prince Athathlaricus, is caught in the middle of the fight. So she devises a plan to offer Justinian to marry her and thus unite East and West under one empire. To get the proposal to Justinian, she blackmails the bishop of Ravenna, Ecclesius, who is part of the papal delegation and has already noticed that Pope John is not able to understand the danger of the situation in which they find themselves. In fact the Pope arrived in Constantinople, is fascinated by the princely welcome, which is reserved for him by the emperor Justin who prostrates at his feet. But it ends up irritating the powerful patriarch of Constantinople, Epiphanius, who feels overwhelmed. Justinian finds himself baffled by this controversy between ecclesiastics and does not know how to fix it. Meanwhile Theodora is restless and unhappy. Justinian has promised to marry her, but after months he is so busy with matters of state that he continually postpones the wedding continuously. She would have her patron, Timothy of Alexandria, celebrate it, but he refuses to come to Constantinople, not to be forced to pay homage to the visiting pope. Theodora fears that Justinian has cooled down on him. He also comes to discover from Narses, a eunuch who acts as an official of the Palace, about the proposal of the Almalasunta's marriage with Justinian. Theodora thus confronts him. Justinian proposes her to be his mistress while he marries Almalasunta, but Theodora refuses indignantly: he has promised her in the past to marry her and she is not willing to accept anything less. After a quarrel in which the two almost break up, Justinian capitulates and says he will marry Theodora by refusing Amalasunta. But he must find a good excuse to justify this choice with Justin and the problem between the pope and the patriarch remains open. At this point Theodora stimulates her inventiveness: to compensate the Patriarch of Constantinople who must cede the honor to celebrate the Christmas mass, it would be the Patriarch himself to celebrate the wedding between her and Justinian, allowing the Patriarch Epiphanius to be proud as he managed to steal Theodora to the influence of the Patriarch of Alexandria Timothy, who is Monophysite.

Ecclesius returns to Ravenna with the Pope delegation, admitting the substantial failure of the mission. Theodoric is enraged and arrests the pope, who will die in prison shortly thereafter. Ecclesius instead gives Almalasunta and Cassiodorus the feral news that Justinian married Theodora and the two have ascended to the throne. Meanwhile Theodoric is increasingly tormented by the guilt and the ghosts of the past and after a vision in which he sees his friend Boethius, gets a fever and dies. Trigvila and Cyprian at this point precipitate in the apartments of Amalasunta and inform the mother who will supervise the education of the little Athalaric, to make him a true Goth king.

Because of the extravagancies Athalaric let himself go and the boy dies suddenly. At this point to keep the power, Amalasunta is forced to call next to her the last male descendant of Theodoric, Theodatus, son of Amalafrida. Gudelina, wife of Theodatus, fears that Amalasunta wants to seduce her husband (who has always been a weak man) to secure the throne. Amalasunta then resumed contact with Constantinople and Justinian. Strong with this support, he kills Trigvila and the other Goths notables by poisoning. Meanwhile in Constantinople Theodora is empress, but she has the suspicion that Justinian is still fascinated by the cultured and unscrupulous Amalasunta, and fears that one day she may show up asking for asylum in Constantinople and convince Justinian to marry her. So she plots with Peter the Patrician, who Justinian sends as ambassador to Ravenna to push Gudelina and Theodatus to kill Amalasunta treacherously. The two kidnap and kill the queen. When Justinian discovers Theodora's involvement, he gets angry, but his wife points out that now after the murder of Amalasunta, he finally has the perfect excuse to do what he wants for years: intervene in the West and win back Ravenna and Rome to be, as the days of Augustus, the emperor of all the Roman world. Theodora served him an opportunity to realize his dream.

“Walkabout” is a long ritual journey that Aboriginal people engage in, by walking through large expanses of grasslands in Australia; this allows them to have contacts and exchanges of resources, both material and spiritual, such as the traditional songs. Bruce Chatwin recounted the Walkabout in his “Songlines”: “(...) It was believed that each totemic ancestor, on his journey across the country had spread a trail of words and musical notes along his footprints, and that these Dream tracks had remained on the ground as a ‘way’ of communication between the various distant tribes. A song was simultaneously both a map and a transmitting aerial. (...) And a man during a walkabout always moved following a song path (...)”

We believe that the name Walkabout describes very well and encompasses the philosophy and the work spirit of our agency.
