THE FIRST EPISODE OF A MAJESTIC SICILIAN TRILOGY

From 1955 to 23 May 1992, when Giovanni Falcone, Francesca Morvillo and the agents of the escort were killed, Simonetta Agnello Hornby holds tight the thread of the family saga that began with Caffè Amaro and continued with Piano Nobile to give us a passionate embroidery of murders, obsessions, loves, and violence in Sicily that came out of the Second World War and was ready to suffer, protagonist and victim, other wars.

"She was burning, that hand, and even her palm was hot. They understood!"

Maria's large, deep, almond-shaped eyes, her regular features, her thick brown hair: her beauty is one that casts a spell on anyone who sets eyes on her, just as it does on Pietro Sala - who falls in love with her at first sight and asks for her hand without any dowry - and, less obviously, on his friend Joshua, who was brought up by her father and whom Maria considers a sort of older brother. Maria is only fifteen, Pietro thirty-four; he is a wealthy bonvivant who loves travelling, gambling and women; she comes from a socialist family of high ideals but limited means. Yet marriage to Pietro proves to be a happy choice: outside the family walls, Maria discovers a broader sense of existence, a freedom to live that coincides with a profound perception of the right to pleasure and enjoyment. Through eros, to which Peter initiates her with wise naturalness, comes for her the knowledge of herself and her own desires, as well as an openness to beauty and a very personal feeling of justice. During a holiday in Tripoli, with the desert as an accomplice, Maria also discovers what the relationship that, until then obscurely, has bound her to Joshua is made of. A scorching love affair begins, spanning more than twenty years of meetings, separations and clandestine meetings waiting for a new peace.

Simonetta Agnello Hornby was born in Palermo in 1945. She has lived in London since 1972 and is an Italian and British citizen. After graduating in law from the University of Palermo, she practised as a lawyer by opening the law firm 'Hornby&Levy' in Brixton, specialising in family and children's law. She has taught child law in the Faculty of Social Sciences at the University of Leicester and was part-time President of the Special Educational Needs and Disability Tribunal for eight years. La Mennulara, her first novel, published by Feltrinelli in 2002 has been translated worldwide. Since then he has published several books including La zia Marchesa (Feltrinelli, 2004), Boccamurata (Feltrinelli, 2007), Vento scomposto (Feltrinelli, 2009), La monaca (Feltrinelli, 2010), Camera oscura (Skira, 2010), Il veleno dell'oleandro (Feltrinelli, 2013), Il male che si deve raccontare (with Marina Calloni; Feltrinelli, 2013), Via XX Settembre (Feltrinelli, 2013), Caffè amaro (Feltrinelli, 2016), Nessuno può volare (Feltrinelli, 2017). In 2017, he contributed a short story to the collection Un anno in giallo (Sellerio), together with Andrea Camilleri, Esmahan Aykol, Gian Mauro Costa, Alicia Giménez-Bartlett, Marco Malvaldi, Antonio

Manzini, Santo Piazzese, Francesco Recami, Alessandro Robecchi, Gaetano Savatteri, Fabio Stassi; in 2018 he published, with Massimo Fenati, the graphic novel La Mennulara (Feltrinelli, 2018). He has also published highly successful cookery-related books with a strong narrative component: Un filo d'olio (Sellerio, 2011), La cucina del buon gusto (with Maria Rosario Lazzati; Feltrinelli, 2012), La pecora di Pasqua (with Chiara Agnello; Slow Food, 2012) and Il pranzo di Mosè (Giunti, 2014).

He also published La mia Londra (Giunti, 2014), a personalised guide/memoir of London and the children's story Rosie and the Squirrels of St. James (with George Hornby; Giunti, 2018). All his books have been best sellers and have sold more than a million copies in Italy. On 2 June 2016, the President of the Republic honoured her with the Order of the Star of Italy in the rank of Grand Officer.

Who was Tito's mother? A no-good, as certain nasty rumours say? Or a lady from a good family forced to 'disappear', as his father Gaspare always said? Tito is at the head of a pasta factory, a source not only of wealth but also of conflict, tension and envy within a family in disarray. It is only his authority that holds it together, that keeps it united, with the strong support of the mild presence of an old aunt: Aunt Rachele has watched over Tito and then his children and has not lost the ability to intuit even that which one would like to keep hidden from her, but in her gaze confused memories and shreds of secrets tenaciously guarded for more than half a century begin to surface little by little. To stir the murky waters further, along with the beautiful, unscrupulous and enterprising Irina, Dante, the son of a former boarding school friend of her aunt, suddenly arrives. And some suspect dark motives. The more the story opens up to unexpected developments in the present, the more the past is thunderstruck by a new light and the mystery it concealed slowly unfolds with the force of a great love story.

Pedrarà. The Sicily of the Hyblean Mountains. A villa lost beneath high rock walls amidst the peeping of ancient tombs and the swirling of streams caressed by the opulence of oleanders. It is here that the Carpinteri family gathers around the bedside of Aunt Anna, who has slipped into a carefree but prescient dementia. Do the stones the woman rants about in her bed really exist? Where are they hidden? But above all, what is the knot that binds the aunt to the handsome Bede, true guardian of the estate and ambiguous factotum? Like water in soft limestone, the Carpinteri dig into the past, search the cupboards, reveal secrets - they want, in unison, truths never told and riches never had. Between the shadows of day and the glimmers of night, influences of local notables, dealings with occult powers, and above all ungovernable passions emerge. The voices of Mara, Anna's favourite niece, and Bede guide us inside this sinuous labyrinth of relationships, removals, memories, until we cross the border of death itself. Simonetta Agnello Hornby brings into focus a micro-world that seems to widen, with a shudder, to represent the failures, ambitions and anxieties for liberation of the family universe, in its entirety.

LIKE A LYRIC BY BORGES, A HOME TELLS THE GENERATIONS THAT HAVE LIVED IT. A CHALLENGING, MOVING BOOK, ORIGINAL IN ITS PLOTS AND STYLE, WRITTEN IN A CLEAR, BRILLIANT LANGUAGE.

ARTURO LORIA AWARD 2000

The first story, The house of 1908, seems to carry the traces of an old poetry by Borges in which things are said, the objects that surround the lives of men, which seem to be the very emblem of passing, of dust, and instead they came first and they will survive. The house tells in first person of the generations that it hosted and it dislocates the stories and the characters not according to the order of the time, but according to that of the space, replacing the before and the after with a here and there. Like silent motionless specters, on which to spread a pitiful and tender gaze. These three debut stories have the ties of memory, time and its prisons all in the forefront.

Madrigale is composed of three fascinating short stories: The house of 1908, Donna Ortensia, Regina.

To write to defeat oblivion. To write to defeat time and, at the same time, discover that after all time is circular and always retraces its steps. This is the core argument of the novel. The narrative structure is at the same time composite and choral.

Giulia Alberico was born in San Vito Chietino in 1949. She studied Classical Literature in Rome and has been a teacher since 1974.

Her books: Cuanta Pasion (Mondadori, 2009), Il vento caldo del Garbino (Mondadori 2007), Come Sheherazade (Rizzoli, 2004), Madrigale (Sellerio 1999) Arturo Loria Award 2000, Il gioco della sorte (Sellerio 2002), and also Il corpo gentile, Conversazioni con Massimo Girotti (Sossella 2003), I libri sono timidi (Filema 2007), Torre Petrosa Prize, 2008. Her last novels, Un amore sbagliato, (Sonzogno, 2015) and Grazia (Sem libri, 2017).

TO SETTLE THE SCORE WITH HIS GRANDFATHER, A CAMORRA BOSS

«Like certain beasts, we happen to follow the smell of blood to find our way home. Sometimes, however, it happens that that crossroads we seek, that fatal crossroads from which the tongues of earth we walk on branch off, is at a point far away in time and in the steps of someone else, steps of a different rhythm and pace, but whose unpredictable trajectories intertwine, overlap and unravel as far as our feet, at the point where we stand poised, waiting to know the way. I have never paid too much attention to the past, let alone our blood. I grew up in a place that I never felt was mine, that I always felt was dead and therefore only good for the dead. [...] But you, too, somehow survived the time that was granted to you among the living. More than blood, more than ashes, the memory of you lives on among the people who saw you looking at the world from the highest and the lowest point, it impregnates the places you inhabited, the blades of grass you trodden and the trembling voices of those who speak your name remembering who you were. And it is for you that I have returned to Marano. I cannot meet you, but perhaps there is a way to face you anyway. I do not know if the underworld really exists, but I have always imagined it as summer in this country. And so if I move my steps in this provincial hell, if I descend into the meanders of this story, maybe I will be able to find you.»

"Gaetano Orlando (1930 - 1998), known as Tanino 'e Bastimento, was for half his life a husband, guappo, man of honour, fruit merchant, father and prophet. The other half he spent in prison. He became famous in Naples following an armed duel he won against one of the biggest Camorra bosses of the 1950s. For Marano and his family, he was certainly a great hero. And I, being his grandson, still cannot understand why. That is why, more than twenty years after his death, I am trying to trace his figure through the memories and testimonies of his seven children, including my mother, bringing to light a secret that Bastimento and my family have tried to hide: in Tanino's life there was in fact another duel, in which a stray bullet killed a three-month-old girl - the original sin that marked my family like a curse. And perhaps the only way to try to break it is to start one last duel, in the name of truth: the one between my grandfather and me". On 16 July 1955, Tanino killed one of the most notorious and powerful camorra bosses of the 1950s. Pasquale Simonetti, husband of Assunta 'Pupetta' Maresca, Francesco Aloia is one of Tanino's grandchildren and, twenty-five years after his grandfather's death, he recounts in his debut novel, with extraordinary lucidity and precision, the story of his family and that of Marano, setting them within the more complex events of the camorrist system of the last century.

Francesco Aloia was born in Naples in 1999 and lived until the age of eighteen in Marano, in the province of Naples. He left because he was convinced that there was nothing to tell about the place where he grew up. Then he moved to Turin, where he attended the Holden School, and began to write only about his home.

AFTER THE SUCCESS OF L'ESTATE CHE RESTA, TRANSLATED INTO GERMANY, SPAIN AND BRAZIL, GIULIA BALDELLI RETURNS WITH A POIGNANT FAMILY NOVEL ABOUT THE FRAGILITY OF ADOLESCENTS, THE VALUE OF MEMORY, THE BOND OF BROTHERHOOD AND THE STRENGTH OF THEIR COMPLICITY.

AN INTIMATE AND POWERFUL NOVEL THAT TELLS OF THE COMPLEXITY OF FAMILY RELATIONSHIPS AND THE UNBREAKABLE BOND BETWEEN BROTHER AND SISTER.

An emotional journey in search of truth and answers that only time and forgiveness can bring.

« I woke up with the echo of her laughter in my heart as if I was the one laughing. Between my lips was a word I had already heard. I was immediately sure of it. It was the last word she had whispered to me in my bed when she was alive.»

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO GROW UP IN THIS DISORIENTATED TIME WITHOUT EMOTIONAL HOLDS? WHAT IS A SENTIMENTAL EDUCATION TODAY?

Seventeen-year-old Adriano has an older sister, Betta, who has long held his hand in place of an insecure mother and a father who left home. One night, however, Betta lies down on the tracks and dies under a train. Adriano closes himself off in painful resentment. He hates his father, detests his mother's weakness and goes so far as to despise the memory of his sister, who had long since ceased to be the sunny, determined girl to lean on, but had started using drugs and now left him alone. As everyday life resumes Adriano is only left with a family that has failed. Whose responsibility is this? His father's? His mother's? Or his own? And why did Betta not even leave him a word of farewell?

The search for answers leads him to an unexpected encounter, a woman, who pushes him to find the strength to educate his own wounded heart and the courage to understand what it means for a boy to truly be a brother.

<<'Do you understand, Adriano? We must prepare for the worst.' Even the worst, not even war. Three years later, lying on her bed, without her forever, pierced by memories, fever and a bad sun, I had to admit that she was indeed right. worse, worse.>>

THEY HAVE WRITTEN ABOUT HER DEBUT NOVEL:

"A story of clear writing, with continuous implications of waiting with its differentiated rhythms, thanks also to a rich world that revolves around the three protagonists, with many characters none of which superfluous and indeed well delineated even psychologically".

Ermanno Paccagnini, La Lettura Corriere della Sera

"As in a long sequence shot, this debut sneaks under the skin and makes us reflect on what has been, on what remains and on what, in order to survive, we had to let go. "

Marta Cervino, Marie Claire

"The thousand ways in which love dresses up, narrated in a story that does not care about genders and tolerates abandonment". Io Donna

"A powerful and unusual story about the essential truth of passion". Elle

"A stylistically mature novel, which tells a reckless and moving love story with many implications". Giornale di Brescia, Francesco Mannoni

Giulia Baldelli was born in Fano, on the Adriatic Sea, in 1979. In 1998 she moved to Bologna, where she obtained a degree in Chemistry and Pharmaceutical Technology. She writes and lives in Bologna, together with her husband and three children. Her debut novel, L'estate che resta, is published by Guanda, and has received a rave review and has been finalist at several Literary Awards.

A SURPRISING DEBUT THAT BRINGS US INSIDE OF A LOVE STORY THAT GOES BEYOND GENRE STEREOTYPES

THREE INTENSE CHARACTERS, FROM CHILDHOOD TO ADULT AGE: A FRIENDSHIP BORN IMMEDIATELY, BEAUTIFUL AS A BATH IN THE RIVER IN SUMMER, THAT TURNS INTO SOMETHING OVER THE YEARS MORE DEEP AND TOTALIZING.

A STORY THAT CELEBRATES LOVE IN ITS MOST TOUGH FORM, THE ONE WHO DOESN'T CARE ABOUT GENRES, SUPPORTS ABANDONMENTS AND IN THE END, WHEN BURNS, LEAVES A SPECIAL ASH FROM WHICH LOVE CANNOT BE REBORN.

"A story of clear writing, with continuous implications of waiting with its differentiated rhythms, thanks also to a rich world that revolves around the three protagonists, with many characters none of which superfluous and indeed well delineated even psychologically". Ermanno Paccagnini, La Lettura Corriere della Sera

"The thousand ways in which love dresses up, narrated in a story that does not care about genders and tolerates abandonment". Io Donna

“A stylistically mature novel, which tells a reckless and moving love story with many implications”. Giornale di Brescia, Francesco Mannoni

«I think that if one day love betrayed me, I would cut my hair» she whispers. Yet another oddity, hair and betrayal. I stand by, her back skin is stretched by the cold. She says nothing more, then I'll come out. «Not me» I tell her in a challenging tone.

For a few minutes she hides behind the towel, then she suddenly sits down. She has the marks of stones on her face and a sadness never seen before. She caresses my hand, stares at it for a long time without changing her expression.

«It's not my reassurance you want» I say.

«You're wrong» she answers with a clear voice.

«I don't think so» I stutter and I am ready to raise the flag of war. Ready to despair without restraint and to hang on to the fence so she doesn't run away. Because insecurity is the worst enemy. It doesn't need to move forward. It waits patiently, widens in the voids, feeds on doubt, manipulates the memory and encumbers every present moment to confuse the future. And in fact today, I am certain that I am thinking about Mattia, not her at that moment. It's me sitting by his side in front of the clear waters, with the shortness of the breath and the absolute certainty that Cristi has resumed contacts with him and I cloud her voice. I refuse to listen to her, to understand betrayal on our future.

Summer, early nineties. In a small town, Giulia, a particular intelligent child, daughter of a caring father and a rigid mother but always present, is forced to take care of Cristi, the Bolognese niece of Ida, an old friend of Giulia's mother, who lives in the oldest and poorest part of the town. After a first child's hesitation, who is younger, silent and much more beautiful than her friends in the town, Giulia becomes curious about Cristi's life. She discovers that she is the daughter of Lilli, a young mother, and of a father who abandoned her soon after birth, but above all, she discovers that she is endowed with an extraordinary sensitivity. This pushes Giulia to bond deeply to the child, that despite the fact she speaks very little, she is able to understand her more than anyone else. At the end of August just when Giulia realizes that her friend's silences are due because of her inability to read and write, Lilli takes her daughter back to Bologna to leave her in the village again with her grandmother for the following summer. Giulia realizes that the feeling she feels for Cristi is much more than a friendship. However, Mattia, a child from Genoa, who spends his summers in the town and that immediately makes a breach in Cristi's heart, even teaches her how to write. Giulia assists, in spite of herself and with great jealousy the beginning of their love which summer after summer, forces her to play an increasingly marginal role. At the end of the fourth summer, events separate the three. Cristi's mother gets married with Fausto, a rich manager from the North of Italy and Cristi no longer gives news of herself. Mattia no longer returns to the town and he will follow his mother abroad after a few years. Even Giulia's life changes. Her father in fact, after a dismissal gets sick of a strong depression. This undermines the serenity and the family economic situation leads to the sale of the beloved family home. Giulia and Cristi meet again in Bologna after ten years: Giulia, brilliant law student is only obsessed by the desire to recover the childhood home. Cristi, first-year student of history, maintained by Lilli's husband, is unable to study and completely alone. Giulia discovers herself to be still deeply in love with Cristi, who is confirmed to be the only person able to understand her, she welcomes her in the apartment and they establish a loving relationship. Also this time however, Mattia reappears and together with Cristi adheres to movements against globalization, while Giulia, now a career lawyer is forced to step aside again, spectator of a visceral love story between them. However events make sure that she does not detach from them, as Mattia is imprisoned because he was guilty of an arson attack on a bank of Bologna. Giulia, at the request of Cristi's parents, agrees to defend him while Cristi, destabilized by the arrest, confesses to be pregnant and begs her not to reveal the pregnancy to Mattia. Some years will follow in which Cristi's traces are lost and Giulia is committed to defending Mattia at best, and building her reputation as a brilliant young lawyer, while Mattia studies in prison, determined to rebuild his life. It's just a truce. Because the three end up meeting again after almost seven years, spending summers in the town. Giulia tells her story, now in her sixties and with a short future ahead. She tells us with intense and intriguing prose, often moving but always dry and clear, about love in its most tenacious form, the one that doesn't care about genders, endures abandonment, betrays because betrayed and in the end, when it burns, it leaves a special ash from which love can only be reborn.

Giulia Baldelli was born in Fano on the Adriatic Sea in 1979. She moved to Bologna in 1998 where she graduated in Chemistry and Pharmaceutical Technologies. She works as an employee but has always cultivated a passion for reading and writing. She lives with her husband and her three children. L'Estate che Resta is her debut novel.

THE LATEST NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "ALFONSINA AND THE ROAD", A GREAT PUBLIC AND CRITICAL SUCCESS.

A POIGNANT NOVEL ABOUT SOLIDARITY, A SENSE OF BELONGING AND THE STRUGGLE FOR A COMMON PURPOSE

ITALY BETWEEN 1946 AND 1968, THROUGH NINA'S EYES, FROM HER CHILDHOOD IN THE ORPHANAGE TO THE HISTORIC OCCUPATION OF THE LANCIANO TOBACCO FACTORY, WHEN THE TRANSFORMATION OF AN ENTIRE COUNTRY SEEMED POSSIBLE.

"A story of struggle and freedom, a story of women and sisterhood, in the years after the war and then the economic boom, in the poor milieus of mothers who abandoned their children and the factory workers who had to occupy the factories to avoid being fired. (...) A musical writing, which allows one to breathe in the dust of the factory, to smell its odours, to participate in the passing of time. From the Italy of Vajont and the death of Pope John XXIII, to the America of John Fitzgerald Kennedy and the dream of Martin Luther King."

La Repubblica

«Simona Baldelli's style reaches the essence of what cannot be seen, capturing thoughts, desires and frustrations of the characters [...], opening up to visions and fantasies». Cinzia Lucchelli, IL VENERDÌ DI REPUBBLICA

THROUGH THE GAZE OF A MEMORABLE CHARACTER, SIMONA BALDELLI RECOUNTS THE ITALY THAT RAN FROM THE RUINS OF THE WAR INTO THE 1960S CHASING THE DREAM OF REDEMPTION.

"From the gloomy atmosphere of an orphanage in the early post-war years to the discovery of the trade union struggle, to the openness at last towards the future of a life that is finally free, to the joyful hope that blossoms in the climate of '68: Simona Baldelli, with "Il pozzo delle bambole" (Sellerio) delivers us a novel with even - but not only - Dickensian tones, confirming the quality and ductility of an author who has been able over time to persuasively measure herself with fantasy on the one hand and narrative non-fiction on the other, while preserving a high stylistic recognisability, a secret coherence of writing and a non-ideological political passion. Without imposing anything on the reader, but accompanying him into a world, at once real and fabulous, of discovery and knowledge.” Motivation of the National Literary Prize Woman Writers Savona 2023.

Nina is abandoned at an orphanage in the immediate post-war period. Nuns skim off from the food and the alms, there is a very fine line between discipline and oppression, and corporal and psychological punishments are an integral part of the education system. When Nina turns seven, along comes Lucia, who is her age and doesn't have the thick skin it takes to survive the senseless cruelty of the nuns. Nina feels compelled to defend her. Together with friendship, she discovers the difference between what is fair and what is unfair, while her sense of exclusion intensifies.

Beyond the walls of the institute there is a world to which they don't have access, and where sensational events take place - the birth of television, the revolutionary speech of a black minister, the assassination of J.F. Kennedy, dams that collapse and drag thousands of bodies downstream, the death of the Good Pope. When at eighteen Nina leaves the orphanage, an unexplored continent lies before her. Her life seems to start all over again: she meets new friends, and with them she participates in demonstrations and strikes and in the historical occupation of the great tobacco factory of Lanciano, in May of 1968, that lasted forty days. The girls' personal and sentimental vicissitudes intermingle with public ones; around them, Italy is changing, it seems as if it is leaving behind the darkness of the past, it's discovering consumption and advertising, fashion and the first economy cars, while transistor radios tell a tale of transformation in lifestyle to the rhythm of songs. The soundtrack of what could have been and never was.

The well of dolls encompasses many novels: a coming of age story, about discovering the world little by little; an adventure about boarding schools, institutes, dormitories and kitchens, places where you grow up and change; a historical fresco of the post-war period that is also a story of factories and fights; and above all a novel about women who become conscious, who make mistakes, who move forward and back in a long and difficult struggle that Simona Baldelli describes with rhythm, verisimilitude, attention and sensitivity.

Alfonsina and the road's quotes

Alfonsina Strada's story is a story of sport and determination, of the fight against prejudices, for equality and respect, for the right to do what makes us happy. A story of disobedience learned on two wheels. Read more now than ever”. Tuttolibri, La Stampa

“The corridora (the runner in an Italian feminine declination) described with humanity by Simona Baldelli in the magnificent novel Alfonsina e la strada, speaks to us about contemporaneity: “I am boundless”. Like all women, like all mothers.” Il Sole 24 ore

"Simona Baldelli does an excellent job of wrapping us in a web of passion and despair, willpower and ringworm, triumphs and thumps." Il Foglio

"In 1924, In a Giro without champions they accepted Alfonsina (by removing the final" a "from the name) to revive interest. A character like her: who at 14, just to leave the house, marries a young and mad mechanic who gives her a surname-prophecy, Strada. Her who runs to pay the fee to the asylum. Who does not accepted a medal pinned by the Duce, but by the Tsarina, yes. Her who doesn't cares what people tell her, or worse, what they scream at her. Her who completes a stage in 21 hours, always in the saddle. "How beautiful you are up there, never get off" Her husband also told her. Only the mad see possibilities where others see obstacles". Gabriele Romagnoli, La Repubblica

TOMORROW NEEDS MEMORY IN ORDER TO EXIST

A fresh, free-flowing novel that has the ability to pull the reader into a parallel dimension despite the fact that the narrative of facts and circumstances belong to painful pages of Italian history: The Second World War, night bombings, starvation, round-ups, displaced persons.

The war rages a few miles from the Gothic Line, in the hills of Pesaro, where Germans and Fascists clash with partisans in the Toscano awaiting the Allied troops. The novel opens with a memorable scene, the arrival of evacuees during the second world war. To Evelina it seems that the souls of the dead are coming out from the snow.

Evelina is only five years old when the first evacuees find shelter in her father's barn, that moment when her life is overwhelmed and the carefreeness of childhood games gives way to the horror of war. But Evelina is protected by two fairies, the dark Nera and the cheerful Scèpa, and she has a power: she can see the world through the eyes of imagination...

The partisans are camped around the house in the country: their leader, The Toscan, has obtained food from Evelina's father, who sympathizes with them. Evelina and her brothers, Sergio and Maria one day find the corpse of a German killed by partisans: the Black makes them run away and hide moments before the Germans arrived. In a relentless succession of twists, on the hills behind Pesaro, the last year of the Second World War is filtered through the magic eyes of childhood, and includes Evelina's whole family and the secret of a Jewish girl hidden under a trapdoor in the barn.

Reality and magic mix and intertwine, bringing to life a peasant and fairy world, the tangle of civil war and world war. The dry style, enriched with dialect elements, makes the tale even more vivid: magic words, amulet words, nursery rhymes, opening the door to dream and prophecy.

PRESS REVIEW

«The surprising debut novel by Simona Baldelli is a magic book and not for the presence of the fairies, but for her natural style of writing that manages to blend real life and traditions, suffering and true stories, little moments of joy and absolute agony.» Alessandra Rota, La Repubblica

«A magical story, full of tenderness and mystery. A poetic and rhythmic novel, suspended between pain and redemption, between fear and strength that serves to undermine them.» Paolo Di Paolo, L'Unità

«A novel that conquers by managing to frame from an undoubtedly original point of view one of the many small individual stories of which the great History is made, understood as the founding moment of our identity: that History that never ceases to fascinate and to ask to be told.» Gaia Rau, La Repubblica

«An extraordinarily mature writing, this being a first work, and very expressive - making extensive use of a dialect very similar to that of Fellini's Amarcord and Otto e mezzo.» Andrea Carraro

« Simona Baldelli, a finalist for the 2012 Calvino Prize, refers precisely to Calvino, paying him an obvious homage with this book written with enchanted eyes.» Massimo Onofri, Avvenire

"With this novel, Simona Baldelli has stolen from the oblivion a story that is a fable and epic all together: the life of Alfonsina Strada, the first woman who participated to the Tour of Italy, challenging the prejudices of the world and her own limits" Antonio Sellerio

"What a great portrait of a strong woman living her dream! The story about Alfonsina Strada Morini, the only woman who ever drove the Giro d'Italia, is thrilling and sensitive. You get very close to this courageous woman who, at the beginning of the 20th century, fought for recognition as a sportswoman in the world of cycling and never let herself be beaten down. An intense and powerful story that will enrich the program of Eichborn Verlag Germany with its inspiring message." Iris Gehrman, Eichborn Verlag.

An engaging novel and sometimes a fairy tale. The endeavors of Alfonsina Strada, a revolutionary cyclist who first took part in the Tour of Italy in 1924.

THE STORY AND ADVENTURES OF ALFONSINA STRADA, THE REBELLIOUS FEMALE CYCLIST WHO WAS THE FIRST TO CHALLENGE MACHISMO IN SPORTS, AND THE ONLY WOMAN TO TAKE PART IN THE TOUR OF ITALY IN 1924, ACCUMULATING NUMEROUS INTERNATIONAL AWARDS.

FROM POVERTY TO FAME AND FINALLY TO OBLIVION, ALFONSINA'S LIFE FINDS IN THE LANGUAGE AND SENSITIVITY OF SIMONA BALDELLI A VOICE TO NARRATE THE EXHAUSTING AND GROUNDBREAKING FEAT OF A WOMAN WHO REFUSED TO LIMIT HERSELF.

When they reached the finish line, she had taken the lead with more than a bike length to spare. She cut the rope with her hands in the air, laughing and crying, free like she had never been. The handlebar wobbled out of control, lurched to one side and sent the bike into the ditch. Alfonsina fell face-first, but she didn't care as she had never known a joy so great. The race organizers, some little boys and the giant asked, "Are you hurt?" She jumped up, full of vigour. "Not really, it was fun!" The cap had landed in the ditch in her fall, and remained there. She picked it up and smacked it against her leg to remove the mud. She shook her head and her hair fell down to her neck. The organizers, the little boys and the giant jumped back and said, "But she is a girl."

Alfonsina and the road, tells the life story of the corridor, from the hard and starving times of Fossamarcia (next to Bologna) where she was born on the 1st March of 1891 and lived until the age of 68 years old, to the 13th of September of 1959, day when she died while the probe Lunik 2 touched for the first time the lunar soil and the humanity crossed its limit towards the sky. In between there were two world wars; a March to Rome where one of Alfonsina's brothers took part, D'Annunzio that gave her a golden star; and an award that Mussolini wished to deliver but she didn't go to collect it. Also, there were a medal that Tsar Nicholas II wanted to pin personally on her chest and the birth of the Southern Question. The kidnapping and the murder of Giacomo Matteotti occurred during the Tour of Italy in 1924. The years passed performing in the European circus. Two weddings. The first one when Alfonsina was 14 years old and found a way to run away from home, because there she was obliged not to ride her bicycle. The young husband Luigi Strada, working as a mechanic, was a kind man with a fragile psyche. He died after long and painful years closed in a mental institution. He sincerely loved her and she loved him back. She maintained his surname even after the second marriage with her colleague Carlo Messori.

In 1924, The Tour of Italy risked not to start for a mass defection due to a refusal from the organizer of granting money compensations to the most famous athletes. Some of the greatest "champions" were missing and the race risked passing unnoticed. Therefore, the organizers became convinced to accept the request of a thirty years old woman that longer insisted to be registered for the competition. Here she was, Alfonsina Strada, who had already taken part in two Tours of Lombardia. Many people were afraid that this Tour could appear as a farce. The route of the contest crossed the peninsula for 3,613 kilometers, including twelve stops punctuated by eleven days of rest. The registered members were 108 and there were just 90 at the start. Only thirty cyclists completed the race and Alfonsina Strada was one of them.

In addition, to the story of Alfonsina, there is also one about a continent, Europe, being developed between wars and starvation, and the long journey of women on the road. The ones we can now define as equal opportunities recounted also through citations from newspapers' articles and documents of the time. Alfonsina and the Road* is the novel of a continuing, constant battle of a woman in order to obtain dignity and a place in the world. And the right to go beyond her own limits.

A LITERARY NOVEL ABOUT SENSE OF GUILT, REGRETS AND REMORSES IN WHICH MAGICAL REALISM MEETS TRADITIONAL ITALIAN FAMILY SAGA. A STORY SETS BETWEEN ITALY AND PORTUGAL IN THE SEVENTIES: THE YEARS WHEN IT SEEMED THAT EVERYTHING WAS ABOUT TO CHANGE FOREVER.

«The surprising debut novel by Simona Baldelli is a magical book [...], a narration that manages to mix life and traditions, suffering and true history with absolute naturalness, little moments of joy and absolute pain». La Repubblica

Clelia lives in a small village in the province of Reggio Emilia, she works in a joust factory and her job allows her to support the family: her widowed mother, enraged with the world, who never misses an opportunity to blame her for everything, and her sister Maria, suffering from poliomyelitis.

Clelia, however, has a side life, a point of observation of her own, from which she immerses herself in the feelings, in the opportunities, in the great changes that take place in the late 50s, and then in the first social demands of the '60s and the harbinger of a darker and more conflictual period. In the stomach she has a lost love and a tangle of sharp stones that will lead her to abandon Italy, turn the page and invent a new life, becoming Amalia.

Amalia arrives in Lisbon in the early '70s and she tries to understand why a small and clear black shadow accompanies her for some time, visible even in the dark. To survive she takes care of an elderly lady, Francisca Josefa, sick with love, who awaits the arrival of the fog and the return of Sebastiano I, the leader who died in the battle of Alcacer-Quibir at the end of the sixteenth century.

In the spare time Amalia sews clothes and in the evening she works in the restaurant of Tia Marga, in the Vicolo dell'Immaginario, which welcomes Amalia in her particular community. She teaches her to prepare the cod, according to a precise ritual to be repeated with patience, to talk with the water, to listen to the fish while they are preparing them, until arrives the awaited day in which the mist falls to cover roads and houses and the souls of the Tagus and the living meet to dine and discuss, to scrutinize the past together and dream of the future.

Simona Baldelli was born in Pesaro and lives in Rome. Writer, actress and speaker, her first novel, Evelina e le Fate (Giunti, 2013), was finalist at the Italo Calvino Prize 2012 and winner at the John Fante Literary Prize 2013. Giunti published also Il Tempo Bambino (2014) and La Vita a Rovescio (2016), winner of the Città di Cave Caffè Corretto Literary Prize 2016. Her last novel, L'ultimo spartito di Rossini (Rossini's Last Score) was published by Piemme in May 2018.

A SMALL POETIC, VISIONARY, MOVING STORY THAT RESTORES CHRISTMAS TO ITS UNIVERSAL VALUE

“Simona Baldelli’s writing style goes to the essence of what is not visible to the eyes. It captures the thoughts, desires and frustrations of the characters. Through stubborn and slow crossing opened to visions and fantasies that leads to a magical realism which contains everything”. Il Venerdì di Repubblica

“A steel cable stretched between a library and a ruined church. An old tightrope walker starting the crossing while one by one the important people of his life appear: his daughter, friends and loves. And those 175 metres that become recapitulation and new beginning”. Marie Claire

“This Christmas fairy tale written by Simona Baldelli is close relative of the Little Prince for delicacy of tones, enchanted atmospheres and density of poetic language. More than ever right for this time because we can find in the story symbolically represented our misfortunes, our fears, but also and above all our desire and ability to dream”. L’Osservatore Romano

An ordinary man, in an ordinary day, in a city, like many. He is seventy-seven years old and was a tightrope walker. Much time has passed since the last passage, since people called him the Air-Man.

Christmas is approaching and the old tightrope walker dreams to give her daughter a gift. He doesn't see her since she became an adult. He dreams a small exploit: sweeping over a strand the distance between the municipal library's balcony towards a ruined church bell tower in the city where he lives. Without notice, without asking for permission nor arranging insurance. The reason would suggest that is an act of madness, but there are reasons for the heart to listen. We will understand them, step by step, along with the 175 metres of the passage, the hanging road that leads to the end, or to a new beginning.

At the first, the city observes astonished, then baffled, eventually passionate and the cameras arrive. One at a time people that had an important role in the man's life (the daughter, the librarian, old a new loves) overlook the strand through the mobile pad of the fire truck and call to account about the inconsiderate action. Down, the citizen and the civil society through microphones and cameras, give their personal interpretation of the show performed upon their heads. The Air Man, over the suspended rope, becomes steel, between wind and rain, he finds the strength of when he was a boy and discovers the fragility of the incipient old age. But he goes ahead, stubborn, in search of the Colour Man (met many years before while he crossed a mountain lake over the strand) and destined to rewrite up there, not just for himself but also for all those that are waiting for him from below. A small poetic, visionary, moving story that restores Christmas to its universal value.

AFTER THE INTERNATIONAL SUCCESS OF "THE SUMMER WHEN STRAWBERRIES BLOOMED", THE SMALL TIGLIOBIANCO VILLAGE RETURNS TO BE THE SETTING FOR A NEW BRILLIANT AND IRRESISTIBLE COMEDY!

L'estate in cui fiorirono le fragole (2023) - Rights sold: Bastei Lübbe - auction (Germany), La belle Etoile – Hachette – two-book pre-empt deal (France) - Vulkan Izdavaštvo (Serbia), Publishing house «Eksmo» (Russia), Bata Press (Macedonia).

The church is packed, Penelope's funeral is in progress, the whole village attends the religious ceremony. It is early October, Tigliobianco is bathed in the colours of autumn and so, naturally, is Villa Edera, which is an explosion of red and yellow.

The question the inhabitants ask themselves is: in the absence of heirs (of whom no one has ever heard) what will happen to Penelope's house?

Ferdinando, the mayor, is convinced that, in the absence of heirs, the property could pass by right to the municipality and starts planning the construction of a large supermarket.

In those same days, Villa Edera is rented by surprise by three women who intend to spend a month away from the hectic life of their city to dedicate themselves to meditation, mindfulness and yoga. They are Flora, Fiona and Frida, all in their seventies, and with them arrives Flora's niece, Azzurra, a woman in her thirties who takes advantage of her aunt's retreat to take a break herself from a job that was not what she expected. Azzurra is a perfumer, has a magical nose and a special talent, but the job for a large French perfume house is distressing her not a little.

The three slightly witchy women are causing the children in Tigliobianco to quiver in excitement and frighten little Margherita, to whom, quite by chance, Virginia, the babysitter, has recently told the fairy tale of Hansel and Gretel in great detail.

Agata, too, is not the usual Agata: during the last months of Penelope's life, this enterprising 12-year-old with a burning passion for Agatha Christie and sleuthing had formed a strong bond with her, and her death, though natural, left her a little shaken, much to the concern of Rachele, her mother.

The new guests, with their oddities, wreak great havoc among the villagers, but they also have a great fascination for the adults and children of Tigliobianco, and indeed some of the villagers soon join in their activities. Among those who begin to converge around the three women guests of Villa Edera will also be Laura, one of the ladies of the Tigliobianco Book Club, who, after last summer's misadventures, begins to have doubts about Irene's leadership within the Club.

There is news for Irene, too: her sister Erica, even more wicked than her, has decided to visit her in Tigliobianco. Erica has started a very fine housewares shop in town, but it is now in a bit of a crisis and is in danger of closing down.

So, amidst sun salutations and children's fantasies about the guests, Penelope's heir apparent arrives unexpectedly. Maximillian is a super-starred chef who owns a restaurant in Taipei, but to tell the truth, he doesn't really know what to do with the home of the great-aunt he never knew, in that remote village. His trip to Tigliobianco is therefore aimed at quickly dealing with the bureaucratic formalities and leaving. But when the house is finally opened, and there is something surprising inside, all plans are upset. Penelope has over the years decorated with a hidden code.

So, among the various characters who have converged on Tigliobianco, there are those who try to decode that secret code, but also those who, like Erica, Irene's sister, see in Penelope's candles the chance to get her shop off to a great start again and snatch Maximillian's promise to give them to her, at a time when he is totally absorbed in other things. Being also a very handsome man, Erica does not rule out being able to take him away as well.

Maximillian, too, is obliged to stay in the village for a few days to deal with the inheritance, and so, while sitting on one of the benches in the square to postpone his flight and organise the restaurant during his absence, he meets Azzurra with whom he ends up befriending immediately, discovering that they share almost the same gift: one for taste and the other for smell.

Of course, the friendship and shared talent will turn into love little by little. They are both artists and the attraction will be, as it should be, a real thunderbolt.

Azzurra, on seeing Penelope's candles, becomes bewitched by them and wonders if by chance they could not be scented and Maximillian decides to leave one for her to try out. The result is extraordinary and during a dinner together they realise that the scent of the candle can intersect with the chef's food and be made even more precious and refined by Penelope's ceramics. Of course, the man has completely forgotten that he had promised the candles as a gift to Erica who, on discovering that Azzurra is working on it and that something is brewing between the two, becomes furious and plans a plan.

Azzurra and Maximillian, despite the fact that they are now in love, knowing that they live so far apart, decide at first to painfully renounce their love affair.

Erica, filled with rage because she had set her eyes on both the candles and Maximillian, decides to go get them and treacherously take them away: had they not already been promised to her, after all? Those who search for Penelope's candles, those who want to convince others that love once found cannot be let go, those who lose sleep to decode the secret code of the rediscovered ceramics, those who do not give up trying to make a profit from Penelope's cottage, those who finally overcome their fear of witches, those who, thanks to yoga and meditation, understand that instead of prevailing over others, one is at peace only if in harmony with the world around one, those who will decide to stay in the small village forever, those who will leave with a profoundly renewed soul.

Autumn is coming to an end and in Tigliobianco by now the whole village has discovered the subtle effects of yoga, so it will be difficult to turn back.

The novel closes on 31 October with a Halloween party in the small village square, during which the community of Tigliobianco, together with the extraordinary guests of the season, will put an end to this new magical existential adventure. But before the end, secrets, hopes, repentances and new projects will be revealed, as the credits roll.

«These were the things that made her happy: to imagine extraordinary things behind the most unexpected ones.»

AN IRONIC AND BRILLIANT COMEDY.

THE STORY OF A BESTSELLING AUTHOR TANGLED UP IN A ROMANCE NOVEL CLICHÉ.

PRISCILLA, IN A CRISIS OF INSPIRATION, TAKES REFUGE IN TIGLIOBIANCO, A TINY VILLAGE OF 40 SOULS, TO CALL IT QUITS WITH LOVE AND THE PROTAGONIST OF HER NOVELS. BUT VERY SOON SHE DISCOVERS IN HORROR THAT SHE HAS BEEN STRUCK BY LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT, AND SHE FINDS HERSELF TANGLED UP IN A REAL ROMANCE NOVEL CLICHÉ.

«It happens to those who grow up surrounded by stories, that they cannot get out and end up creating a tiny and sheltered world, protected from reality. An Alice who had never come back from Wonderland. This was Priscilla. Hurt by real life, she had found refuge in the imagined one and she had curled up there, in the blank spaces between words. Where she was safe.»

It seems a summer like many others in the small village of Tigliobianco: the old ladies poke their nose in everyone's business, the children run wild, the ladies from the Book Club annoy the librarian... But then Villa Edera, the Victorian dwelling at the edge of the village, is rented for a couple weeks to Priscilla Greenwood, a romance novel author of great success in a crisis of inspiration, who is looking for calmness and anonymity to find a way of getting rid of Calliope of the Topaz, her cheesy and fiery protagonist. Things in Tigliobianco, however, don't go as Priscilla planned: gossips at war, disappeared cats, young girls who want to become detectives, smuggled letters, a mythical recipe notebook, lost for years, that contains the secret to the most delicious cake in the world, the Supreme, not to mention the Strawberry Competition, that takes place every year on the last Sunday of July and where the whole village competes with strawberry cakes. And Cesare Burello, the plastic surgeon on holiday in his home town... That's how Priscilla finds herself tangled up in a real romance novel cliché. What should she do? Run or give a chance to Cesare who looks like a carbon copy of Roger MacMillan, the charming protagonist of the Harmony novel she wrote? Between nighttime picnics, conspiracies and an exquisitely literary treasure hunt, Priscilla will have to deal with the question that has been tormenting her forever: is it true that real life can't be like a novel? And meanwhile, what happened to the legendary recipe of the Supreme, the most delicious cake in the world, disappeared into thin air thirty years before, and to which Cesare's fate seems connected?

An ironic and amusing novel, halfway between a fairy tale and a comedy. With The summer when strawberries bloomed the author is capable of creating, with a light and ironic touch, a human community filled with original and extravagant characters.

Anna Bonacina was born in a small town in Friuli Venezia Giulia, and then became a librarian in Udine. So she loves to read stories, and sometimes to write them. She writes articles on children's literature for the magazine "Il Pepeverde" and novellas for the magazine "Intimità". Her short story with the title L'amore è un airone azzurro ("Love is a light blue heron") was selected among the finalists of the prize "Leggi scrivi Eataly" organized by Eataly and Scuola Holden and was published in the book by the same title.

REPRINT AFTER TWO WEEKS!

AFTER HIS BESTSELLER "PERCHE' PARLAVO DA SOLO" (3 REPRINTS AND MORE THAN 50.000 COPIES SOLD) PAOLO BONOLIS, WELL KNOWN FOR HIS EXTRAORDINARY LINGUISTIC VERVE, WANTED TO TACKLE FICTION WRITING.

"Bonolis stages, as in a chamber drama, a direct confrontation with his own conscience to offer us an intimate and collective reflection, lucid and provocative, on the issues that question humanity yesterday and today, from the illusions of religion to the mystifications of power, to touching the raw nerves of a hyper-technological society that has delegated to artificial intelligence the control of our children, exposing them to the risks of a present without memory and a future without freedom."

«He shifts his gaze to his wife's grey eyes. Around them, the flat bathed in silence. And around them, the city, noisy, electric, coming through the window. From outside, from the darkness of the night, there is one of many, hundreds, thousands of illuminated windows.»

A man and a woman, husband and wife, leave an 'aperitif' and walk home. It has been a long time since they have walked together, and the opportunity is there to have a freewheeling conversation. She hurts her shoes, but he finds them seductive. From the smallest things one is quick to move on to the highest systems in the verbal ping pong. Does the Dome (San Peter), i.e. the Church, oppress us or enchant us? The Almighty: who is he or what is he? When they get home, the close dialogue does not stop and it is enough to glance into the son's room, currently on a school trip, to see concerns arise, between a poster of Sfera ebbasta and a pair of astronomically priced trainers: why does he want to leave the Catholic school? Why is he always alone?

From there, husband and wife turn back on themselves and each other's jealousies: who is Mizuko and who is Rocco, the lifeguard she dug up on Facebook?

The exchange of jokes leaves one breathless and meanwhile the two eat, drink, make love. And they resume talking about everything, about the ravages of technology and gorging on sushi. All night long. Until morning.

Paolo Bonolis (Rome 1961). He has been one of the most popular entertainment stars in Italy over the last thirty years. He hosted the successful TV show for kids Bim Bum Bam (from 1982 to 1990), and then worked for Fininvest and for Rai hosting TV shows such as Non è la Rai ("This is not Rai TV"), I cervelloni ("Brainiacs") and Beato tra le donne ("Blessed Art Thou Among Women"). He was instrumental in creating Ciao Darwin ("Hello Darwin") and Chi ha incastrato Peter Pan? ("Who Framed Peter Pan?"), he hosted Striscia la notizia (alongside Luca Laurenti), two editions of the Sanremo Festival and the talk-show Il senso della vita ("The Meaning of Life"). Rizzoli has published his bestseller Perché parlavo da solo in 2019.

SELECTED BY THE CAMPIELLO JURY PRIZE 2024

FIRST REPRINT AFTER ONE MONTH!

Proposed for the STREGA PRIZE 2024 by Romana Petri, with this motivation:

How many Italians have fled to Argentina to escape Nazi-fascism and then found themselves under the oppression of Videla's dictatorship? Who knows what it is about peace that at one point it bores, arrives one way and then leaves another? Adrián N. Bravi tells us the story of this formidable, beautiful and fascinating woman as Jeanne Moreau, who in Buenos Aires participates in cultural and political life on the side of the poor by founding the magazine Contorno. An artist in her own right, she is a talented ceramist, art critic and lover of literature. Literature that she has divided into two categories: that to read and forget (to read anyway) and that to read and remember.

Fascination does not seem to let beauty slip away, intelligence does not add an indelible parochialism in those who, much younger, know a woman who is about to become old, yet see her as she was. Adelaida feels Argentinean. She married the writer David Viñas by whom she had two children: Mini and Lorenzo. Who could have predicted that her political ideas would catch fire in her two children and that, having fled fascist Italy as a child, she would find herself the mother of two desaparecidos? What was left for Adelaida to do in Buenos Aires? How can you stay in a country that you know is yours but that has stolen two children from you? Leaving is the will to continue living anyway, even after painful losses and after being over fifty. Bravi's admirable writing is like a mirror. He writes by looking inside himself, but does not find himself. Flaubertianly identified with Adelaida, it is she who makes him move, relive, suffer, but also have a few fundamental, fleeting encounters with happiness in the latter part of his lonely life. It is from that mirror that Bravi realises, at Adelaida's funeral, how futile it is sometimes to close one's eyes to the dead. Who says they cannot see us?

A work of rare beauty (much more than a biography), Bravi gives us the life of a unique woman, Adelaida, that no reader will ever forget.

A WOMAN, AN ARTIST, A MOTHER. ADELAIDA GIGLI WAS ONE OF THE MOST SURPRISING FEMALE FIGURES IN ARGENTINA IN THE LAST CENTURY. READY TO HIDE WEAPONS AND DISSIDENTS IN HER HOME, TO LAUGH IN THE FACE OF POWER, TO REBEL AGAINST CONVENTIONS, TO SHOW HERSELF EXUBERANT AND IRREVERENT, ADELAIDA ALWAYS EXPRESSED HERSELF TO THE FULL AND HAD TO PAY FOR THE HORROR OF CENSORSHIP, DICTATORSHIP AND LOSS IN HER OWN SKIN. ADRIÁN N. BRAVI'S PORTRAYAL OF HER IS PASSIONATE AND VIVID, UNMISTAKABLE.

"For Adelaida, I was convinced, beauty was an open wound".

Born in Recanati in 1927 - the daughter of the painter Lorenzo Gigli who, with his family, decided to leave Italy behind during Fascism for Argentina - Adelaida Gigli was a non-conformist and brilliant artist, funny and ironic despite her dramatic and painful past. As charming as Jeanne Moreau, as full of spirit as Wislawa Szymborska and as passionate about cigarettes as Ingeborg Bachman, Adelaida was in Buenos Aires in the late 1940s and immersed herself in the political and literary life of the city. Together with her husband David Viñas and other intellectuals, she founded the magazine Contorno, destined to become a point of reference for the Argentina of the 1950s, an experience from the bottom and politically aligned with the poorer classes, in contrast to Victoria Ocampo's wealthy and upper class Sur. In those years Adelaida has two sons, Mini and Lorenzo, militants of the revolutionary group montoneros. Both 'desaparecidos', she in 1976, he in 1980. Immediately after the 1976 coup d'état and the heartbreaking loss of her children, Adelaida was forced to leave Argentina for her native Recanati, where she began a new artistic and personal life. Also in the city of Leopardi, she died in 2010, in a hospice, where she spent her last nine years in solitude. Adrián N. Bravi retraces with friendship and grace the stages of the life of an exceptional woman, whom he got to know and of whom he was a confidante, and as he does so, he tells us about the years of the dictatorship, the political commitment of the most young people, the cultural ferment, and the strength of Argentine literature. How does one remain in the world after the loss of one's children? How did those who saved themselves by fleeing political persecution live? In this biographical novel, the formidable humanity of a woman and an artist emerges and moves, while the writing recounts the power of memory, affection and resistance against all attempts at erasure and oblivion.

Adrián N. Bravi was born in Buenos Aires, lived in Argentina until the age of 25, then moved to Italy to pursue his studies in philosophy. He lives in Recanati and is a librarian. In 1999, he published his first novel in Spanish and in 2000, he started writing in Italian. His published books: Restituiscimi il cappotto (Fernandel 2004), La pelusa (Nottetempo 2007), Sud 1982 (Nottetempo 2008), Il riporto (Nottetempo 2011), L'albero e la vacca (Feltrinelli 2013), L'inondazione (Nottetempo 2015); Variazioni straniere (racconti, EUM 2015); La gelosia delle lingue (saggi, EUM 2017). In 2010 he published a children's book, The thirsty tree (Helbling languages). His last books, L'idioma di Casilda Moreira (Exorma 2019), Il levitatore (Quodlibet, 2020) and Verde Eldorado (Nutrimenti, 2022), finalist at Campiello Prize 2023.

THE MIGRATION, THE SETTLING, THE SEARCH FOR AN ADOPTIVE WORLD, THE LANGUAGE AND ITS CONNECTIONS WITH THE COLLECTIVE CONSCIOUSNESS: THE WRITING THEMES OF ADRIAN N. BRAVI HERE MERGE IN A COMING-OF-AGE STORY, IN A TRAVEL CHRONICLE, IN AN EXISTENTIAL PARABLE - OR SIMPLY IN THE VOICE OF A YOUNG MAN WHO, AFTER LOSING HIS PLACE IN THE OLD WORLD, IS ABLE TO FIND ANOTHER WHILE SEEKING HARMONY WITH THE NEW ONE.

A FASCINATING NOVEL ABOUT SEBASTIAN CABOT'S TRAVELING, THE STORY OF AN EXISTENTIAL PARABLE THAT ALSO INCLUDES THE THEMES OF NATURE, LANGUAGE, INTEGRATION AND IDENTITY.

THROUGH UGOLINO'S VOICE, THAT CHARMS US FROM THE VERY FIRST LINES, A NEW VISION OF NATURE, LIFE AND RELATIONS BETWEEN HUMAN BEINGS OPENS UP BEFORE THE READER.

"I am asking you," I told Giorgina while holding the Periphyseon, "because here it says that there has been a second creation after Adam's. A creation that's a bit lopsided, I'd say, not perfect. But here," I said pointing at the forest, "it seems you have been created after the second creation, this one like a refined creation, retouched, do you know what I mean? The second, the one we have on the other side of the ocean, in the old world, is made of misfortunes and calamities. But this one, even if you do eat us raw, doesn't seem made only for man... Here all that surrounds us, trees, animals, marshes... they seem to constantly begin, as if we were at the dawn of everything".

Ugolino is forced to wear a hood because he was disfigured by a fire, and in the very urban Venice of 1526, scarring is a disgrace to keep hidden, a horror, the memento of the misfortunes that life can trample you with. But the young man cannot stay long in the room where he is holding up. Not tolerating his presence, his father decides to have him board the expedition of a friend who at that point can claim the title of Piloto Mayor: Sebastian Cabot. On April 3rd, 1526, Ugolino is aboard Cabot's flagship. The route is for the Maluku Islands in Indonesia, but the legendary explorer will never get there. Cabot falls short of the contract with the Crown of Spain to chase after the tale of a few survivors of a past expedition, telling about a city made of silver and gold. At first the fleet penetrates the Río de la Plata, then goes up the rivers Paraná and Paraguay. And it is while navigating on the Paraguay that Ugolino is captured by an indigenous tribe together with four comrades, immediately slaughtered and devoured. While he, freed from the hood, is spared precisely because of his disfigured face, since in those marks the natives recognize the touch of the Karai, the lords of fire. From then on, the young man starts to live with the indigenous people, discovering a nature, a culture, a humanity, a language to learn and understand without demanding or expecting anything in return. Because in those territories that barely appear on the maps of the West there is so much life to appreciate, as long as those maps and the usual perspectives on the world are overturned. A life that vibrates in each and every inch of reality and in the body of Giorgina, the girl that more than any other creature gives meaning to Ugolino's settling, pushing him to wonder what the ultimate meaning of creation is.

Adrián N. Bravi was born in Buenos Aires, he lived in Argentina until the end of the 1980s, and then moved to Italy to continue his philosophy studies. He lives in Recanati and works as a librarian at the University of Macerata. In 1999 he published his first novel in Spanish (Río Sauce, Paradiso - Buenos Aires) and around 2000 he started writing in Italian. Some of his books: Restituiscimi il cappotto ("Give me back my coat", Fernandel 2014), La pelusa ("The pelusa", Nottetempo 2007), Sud 1982 ("South 1982", Nottetempo 2008), Il riporto ("The comb over", Nottetempo 2011 - finalist at the 2012 Comisso Prize), L'albero e la vacca ("The tree and the cow", Feltrinelli 2013 - winner of the 2014 Bergamo Prize), L'inondazione ("The flood", Nottetempo 2015), Variazioni straniere ("Foreign variations", short stories, EUM 2015), La gelosia delle lingue ("The jealousy of languages", essays, EUM 2017), L'idioma di Casilda Moreira ("The language of Casilda Moreira", Exòrma 2019), Il levitatore ("The levitator", Quodlibet 2020). In 2010 he published a text for children, The thirsty tree (Helbling languages). His books have been translated into English, French, Spanish and Arabic.

A CHILD IN THE WARSAW GHETTO, THE COURAGE OF A WOMAN WILLING TO DO ANYTHING TO GIVE HIM A NEW LIFE. THE NOVEL INSPIRED BY THE REAL STORY OF IRENA SENDLER, THE «SCHINDLER OF WARSAW».

WINNER OF THE ALVARO BIGIARETTI PRIZE, NICOLA BRUNIALTI ONCE AGAIN WRITES A BOOK WITH A STRONG SOCIAL MESSAGE, EXPLORING NOT ONLY MEMORY BUT ALSO RACISM AND INCLUSION.

Vienna, 2020. Marcus is only fourteen years old when he gets suspended for five days, accused, together with three friends, of writing slurs directed at a Jewish classmate on the walls of the school. The young boy risks facing heavy charges, so his mother Johanna, desperate, turns to his grandfather Rudolf Steiner, a former teacher, asking him to step in and put in a good word with the current principal. Rudy, now eighty-four, deeply shaken by his nephew's actions, decides to go on a trip to Poland with him. It will be the opportunity to tell him about his incredible and painful past, that not even his daughters know about, and relive his story, that of one of the last Jewish children saved by Irena Sendler, the "Schindler" of Warsaw, the heroine of the ghetto who hid the real names of thousands of those children in a jam jar buried under an apple tree.

A novel inspired by the real story of Irena Sendler, the Polish heroine called the «Schindler of Warsaw», who in the early 1940s saved almost three thousand Jewish children.

The narrative voice of Nicola Brunialti is powerful, he confirms himself as one of the Italian writers capable of telling a story that maintains stylistic dignity and originality of the plot in the face of themes as investigated as difficult as the anti-Semitism. Il Giornale

"A crucial issue concerning memory, new generations, the rise of anti-Semitism, the role of parents and the school system". Avvenire

"Telling the story of Janusz, Brunialti writes above all the story of the heroic deeds of Irena Sendler who died almost 100 years old in 2008". La Gazzetta di Parma

Nicola Brunialti has worked in advertising for many years, and was behind the campaigns for Lavazza, Tim, Alitalia and others. He has been a writer for popular TV shows since 2009. He is the author of more than 10 children's fiction books, and of a number of songs by Simone Cristicchi and Renato Zero. With Sperling & Kupfer has published Il paradiso alla fine del mondo (2019). He is a descendant of Alessandro Manzoni.

Title: THE BLUE HOUSE

(BARACCA E BURATTINI)

Pages: 350

First Publisher: Mondadori

Publication date: 4th February 2025

A FAMILY NOVEL THAT WINDS ITS WAY FROM THE SECOND WORLD WAR TO THE PRESENT DAY, THREE GENERATIONS THROUGH SIX NARRATIVE VOICES, WHICH TAKE TURNS INTEGRATING, PASSING THE BATON, RECTIFYING, CONTRADICTING EACH OTHER, TRYING TO SHED LIGHT ON FAMILY SECRETS.

FROM GRANDFATHER ERMES ONWARDS, WHO LIVES GUARDING A HEARTBREAKING SECRET, NO ONE REALLY KNOWS HOW TO STAY WHERE THEY ARE, NO ONE KNOWS HOW TO KEEP THE PEOPLE THEY HAVE LOVED OR WHAT THEY HAVE BUILT, ALMOST AS IF IT WERE A SENTENCE HANDED DOWN FROM GENERATION TO GENERATION.

AS IN THE GREAT FILMS, THE SAFE HARBOR AROUND WHICH GENERATIONS COME AND GO IS A HOUSE, THE BLUE HOUSE.

Elle is an actress with conviction and with equal conviction depends on psychotropic substances. Behind her is the story of a family that stretches from World War II to our present. From grandfather Ermes onward one destiny: that which breaks, which consumes, which shatters. No one really knows how to stay (metaphorically, no) where they are, and indeed the expression “shacking up” recurs from generation to generation. No one knows how to keep the people they have loved or what they have built. All the more so Elle's father, Ranieri, who believes as a doctor that he can lift the terminally ill out of pain and life and finds himself at the center of a media campaign that, over time, debases him (“the doctor who wanted to play God”) and exposes him to dangerous relationships. The one place that episodically attracts the three generations is the Blue House, a hut by the sea that, over time, has become a refuge, a studio, a residence. Around the Blue House revolve the unspoken and the dark of the family, and it is there that with effort but also with determination one is able to illuminate the trail of violence, abandonment and rebirth that Elle is still serving on her skin.

Dario Buzzolan is a writer, playwright and television author. Born in Turin on October 12, 1966, he graduated in theoretical philosophy with Gianni Vattimo, with a thesis on Georges Bataille's Eroticism. His first novel, Dall'altra parte degli occhi (Mursia) won the Calvino Prize in 1998; he later published Non dimenticarti di respirare (Mursia 2000), translated in France at Lattès, Tutto brucia (Garzanti 2003), Favola dei due che divennero uno (Baldini Castoldi Dalai 2007) and I nostri occhi sporchi di terra (Baldini Castoldi Dalai 2009), a finalist for the 2009 Strega Prize. Following are Se trovo il coraggio (Fandango Libri 2013), Malapianta (Baldini e Castoldi 2016), La vita degna (Manni 2018), In Verità (Mondadori 2020) and Perché non sanno (Mondadori 2022). He is the author of the first Italian translation of Mark Twain's Following The Equator (Seguendo l'equatore, B.C. Dalai Editore, 2010). His new novel, also for Mondadori, is due out in 2024. Since 2015 he has been a member of the “Amici della Domenica” the historical jury of the Strega Prize. Among his most recent television collaborations, he is the author of the program hosted by Bianca Berlinguer È sempre Cartabianca on Rete 4. He was chief author of The Words of the Week (2017-20), by Massimo Gramellini, and of Michele Santoro's M (with whom he conceived the program's format, 2017-2018). In 2010 he was among the creators of Agora, Rai 3's current affairs and politics daily, for which he was chief author until 2017. He has written plays (including Visita dell'uomo grigio, produced in 2001 by the Teatro Stabile di Torino, and Target, staged at the Nice European Theater Festival in 1999), an opera libretto for Lucio Gregoretti (Apocalypse of Alexander) and numerous short films, which he has also directed (among others, Franz Kafka. In the penal colony, a finalist for the 1999 Riccione TTV award). A film critic, he co-directed the Bellaria Anteprima Festival for two years (1997-99, with Mario Sesti), and between 2008 and 2011 he was a consultant and selector for the Rome International Film Festival (“Extra” section).

IF I FIND THE COURAGE IT STARTS FROM A FAR. FROM A FESTIVAL OF THE GOOD BOURGEOISE OF TURIN, AT THE BEGINNING OF THE EIGHTIES, WHICH RETURNED TO BECOME PRESENT DUE TO A NEWS ARTICLE.

THE NIGHT WHEN A BOY AND A GIRL DISAPPEARED INTO NOWHERE. THE FIRST TO EMERGE THE NEXT DAY MURDERED WITH A GUN SHOT TO THE HEAD, THE SECOND LEAVING NO MORE TRACE. THE YEAR WAS 1980 AND THE PARTY PRECEDED, METAPHORICALLY AND NOT, THE MARCH OF THE 40 THOUSAND, SYMBOL OF THE END OF THE SEVENTIES.

October 1980. A dramatic event shakes an entire city. Two teenagers, Elen and Luca, mysteriously disappear. No explanation, no culprit, no witnesses. Yet the two, the last time, were seen among dozens of kids, at a party: an unforgettable party for the participants, all children of the good Turin bourgeoisie. Teenagers who just love to have fun and get high, apparently unaware but in reality imbued with the very heavy climate of a city shaken by subversive tension, by social conflicts, by the crisis of industry. Today Matteo is forty-seven years old, with an ex-wife and two children, and an indolence that is leading him to lose himself. Inside him, constant, deaf, a secret that torments him. He was there, at that party where everything began and everything ended. A night that could be called a nightmare, if only it weren't all terribly true: the right meeting, the wrong people, the sudden death. Even though that's an age where it's absurd, it's unfair to die. Can Matteo, more than thirty years later, free himself from all that weight? A huge thing. The choice of a lifetime. Yet one step would be enough. Just one step, and the truth would come out. A dark, tormented truth, like the era from which it painfully re-emerged.

Dario Buzzolan, born in Turin in 1966, is a writer, playwright and television author. He has published nine novels, including Dall'altra parte gli occhi (Calvino prize 1998), Don't forget to breathe (2000), Everything burns (2005), Our eyes dirty (finalist for the Strega prize 2009), If I find courage (2013), Malapianta (2016), La vita degna (2018) and In Verità (2020), Why they don't know (2022). He edited, among other things, the Italian editions of texts by Aumont, Chion, Jousse, Gaudreault, Vanoye, and Mark Twain, of whom he translated Following the Equator. Theater writer and author of several film criticism essays, he is a consultant for the Rome International Film Festival and a collaborator of «La Repubblica» and «Linus». He hosted the television program Anni Luce, broadcast on La7 and is the author of Agorà, broadcast on Rai 3.

FINALIST STREGA AWARD 2021

«This is a book that is extremely enjoyable to read thanks to its flowing writing and compelling architecture, and that succeeds in condensing decisive themes of our recent history, casting them like an intense and clarifying light on today. An important novel, a sorrowful yet hopeful tale where civil themes, reflection on love and its tortuousness, existential probing and historical fresco coexist, in perfect balance, with a refined, conscious, powerful taste for narrative.»

Guido Davico Bonino

«Our earthy eyes is an accomplished and sincere existential diagram of real, palpitating characters, who in no way appear abstract but present themselves as flesh-and-blood, three-dimensional, problematic beings. This story really does not fail to dig deep into the soul. »

Alberto Bevilacqua

«And as he felt the softness and edges of that substantial body, which somehow felt like his own, he thought confusedly that what was happening must be some kind of breakthrough; that perhaps, at last, he was really about to enter another world. »

1945. The war is over, but in the cities and in the mountains, people are still shooting. Some speak of a 'reckoning', of the 'blood of the defeated'; for others, it is the last throes of a horror that comes from afar. 1994. Maddalena is twenty-seven years old and has just returned to Rome from a long business trip around the world. A return that is like a rude awakening: her father, Davide, has disappeared in the Po, in Turin. A few days earlier, he had been publicly accused of having killed a man in June 1945. Davide was a partisan, the victim a republican, but for those who blame him it was a personal vendetta, a cold-blooded murder. Maddalena knows almost nothing about her father, and had had no relationship with him for some time: so, she is almost surprised at herself when she suddenly feels the duty to search for the truth.

Through the story of her investigation into the past, and the reconstruction of Davide's life - the partisan war, the choices against the tide, the disappointments, and above all the relationship, as secret as it is profound, with a famous actress - "I nostri occhi sporchi di terra", already a finalist for the Premio Strega and now republished in a new edition, recounts with the rhythm of a detective story the many events, both bright and dark, that have marked the last eighty years of our country, embodying them in the life of a shy and intransigent man who, years later, claims and defends the essence of an ethical and civil love and passion.

Title: DIEGUITO E IL CENTAURO DEL NORD
(DIEGUITO AND THE NORTHERN CENTAUR)

Publisher: Mondadori
Publication date: 30th January 2024
Pag. 200

Rights: Worldwide

OLD DIEGO TELLS HIS 13-YEAR-OLD GRANDDAUGHTER, ADELITA, ABOUT THE TIME WHEN HE WAS A YOUNG BOY AND, THROUGH VARIOUS VICISSITUDES, MET HIS MYTH: PANCHO VILLA, THE LEGENDARY CENTAUR OF THE NORTH.

A TOUCHING NOVEL ABOUT THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN GENERATIONS, THE PAST AND THE PRESENT AND THE IDEALS WE NEED TO LIVE WELL IN TODAY'S WORLD.

"Diego is a worthy son of his great country, where memory is cultivated with a museum culture that makes history a living and usable subject, and today the ancient hacienda of Canutillo, in Durango, is able to convey what that extraordinary experience was. One never dies as long as memory remains alive. ¡Viva Villa!". Pino Cacucci

It is 1983, in Chihuahua. Adelita listens to the stories of her maternal grandfather, her abuelo: she listens to them with the enchanted participation that is of children when they are discovering the world, and along with the world she also discovers an important piece of its history. Adelita's listening is all the more important because the information she receives at school is opaque and contradictory and needs a more transparent voice, closer to the heart of things and events.

Parral, 1916. Pancho Villa is wounded, hiding in a cave in the desert. The abuelo, who is then still little Dieguito, regularly brings him the necessities of life, at the risk of being captured. Dieguito moves swiftly and carefully. He can stand up to the gringos, and he knows he has a very important mission to fulfil: to assure Villa, whom his men try to make believe dead, a new existence.

Adelita has many questions, and all of them converge in the end into one: who is Pancho Villa, the soul of an almost forgotten Mexico? L'abuelo recounts, and the more it recounts, the more it stirs around the figure of the leader a hint of legend and hope that nevertheless coincides with a much more palpable destiny of social justice.

Adelita has assimilated, grown and become a beloved voice, in the tradition of memorable singers like the great Chavela Vargas. As if distilling within herself the words of Dieguito and the memory of revolutionary Mexico, she sings in front of an adoring audience and, among others, repeats a poignant song that, interweaving past and future, kindles a new awareness of the present: You lived through those times and now... tell me, what remains?

Pino Cacucci, (1955) Born in Alessandria he grew up in Chiavari, near Genua, and moved to Bologna in 1975 to study at the faculty of the performing arts. In the early 1980s he spent long periods of time in Paris and Barcelona, and then in Mexico and in Central America, where he lived for a few years. He is a translator and was awarded several prizes, including that for the best translation from the Cervantes Institute in Rome, and the Premio Italia-México 2017 awarded in Mexico City. He published Outland rock (Traseuropa, 1988, winner of the MystFest prize; Feltrinelli, 2007), Puerto Escondido (Interno Giallo, 1990, then Mondadori and finally Feltrinelli, 2015) upon which Gabriele Salvatores based the homonymous film, Tina (Tina Modotti's biography), upon which a Mexican producer is developing a tv series, San Isidro Fútbol, upon which Alessandro Cappelletti based the film Viva San Isidro, starring Diego Abatantuono, (Interno Giallo, 1991; Feltrinelli, 2005), La polvere del Messico ("Mexico's dust", Mondadori, 1992; Feltrinelli, 1996, 2004), Punti di fuga ("Vanishing points", Mondadori, 1992; Feltrinelli, 2000), Forfora ("Dandruff", Granata Press, 1993), later on expanded into Forfora e altre sventure ("Dandruff and other misfortunes", Feltrinelli, 1997), In ogni caso nessun rimorso ("In any event no remorse", Longanesi, 1994; Feltrinelli, 2001), La giustizia siamo noi ("We are justice", with Otto Gabos; Rizzoli, 2010). With Feltrinelli he also published: Camminando. Incontri di un viandante ("On the road. IS IT RIGHT TO BREAK THE LAW WHEN THE LAW SEEMS UNJUST TO US?

WHAT WAS THE RIGHT THING TO DO? WHAT WAS THE IMPULSE TO LISTEN? WAS HE TO ACT AS A LAWYER OR AS A MAN? CONSCIENCE AND LAW, THE USUAL DILEMMA BETWEEN ETHICS AND LAW. BUT IN THAT VERY PARTICULAR CASE, WERE THINGS REALLY SO DIFFERENT? WHEN IT COMES TO THE DEATH WISH OF A SUFFERING PERSON, CAN THERE BE A LAW OTHER THAN CONSCIENCE?

Despite many years in and out of courtrooms, Filippo Santini is still convinced that justice is fever, desire, hunger, humanity. After all, if after graduating he decided to become a criminal lawyer, disappointing his cumbersome father Giovanni who wanted him to be a magistrate, it is because this is the only way he can be close to the only real protagonists of judicial events, the defendants. It does not even matter if they are innocent or guilty: each of them is the bearer of a unique story, and must be defended tooth and nail, because when you fight for your life, only the result counts. Filippo is not interested in morals: right and wrong is not his business, only the legitimate and the illegitimate. Everything changes when Sandra enters his office: fragile and beautiful, she tells him that five years earlier her beloved husband Alberto was run over by a hit-and-run driver, and since that day he has lived confined to a bed, dependent on others for everything. Now Alberto wants to die, and Sandra, with a shattered heart, has resigned herself to accept it.

Filippo chills: the lawyer in him cries out to stay away from such a thorny case, but a deeper part thinks otherwise... a deeper part that will soon be forced to ask whether life is a right or a duty, and what we are willing to do after answering that question. Francesco Caringella puts all his lucid knowledge of the eternal confrontation between Justice and Law at the service of a story about the most poignant and deeply human of dilemmas: life, and the right to give it up.

Francesco Caringella, a former police commissioner and criminal magistrate in Milan during “Mani Pulite” investigation, is president of a section of the Council of State. For Mondadori he published La corruzione spuzza. All the effects on our daily lives of the disease that threatens to kill Italy (2017), 10 Lessons on Justice for Curious and Perplexed Citizens (2017), Corruption Explained to Kids Who Care About the Future of Their Country (2018). He is also the author of Non sono un assassino (Newton Compton, 2015), from which the film of the same name starring Riccardo Scamarcio was made, and two trial fiction L'estate di Garlasco (2019) and Il delitto della dolce vita (2020), both published by Mondadori in the collection Strade Blu. Again, by Mondadori, he has published two procedural detective stories starring Judge Virginia Della Valle, Oltre ogni ragionevole dubbio and La migliore bugia, both published in Giallo Mondadori and optioned for Tv movie series.

A COMPELLING FAMILY SAGA OF THE 19th CENTURY

The intertwined destinies of a businesswoman ahead of her time and her workers, the employees of the chocolate factory.

«The conches are still in operation, and make the rolls shake: the cocoa slowly mixes with the sugar. There isn't much to mix, but the scent is strong and inebriating. The tusa walks by the machine as she heads toward her position, and she closes her eyes to savor all its intensity. The war is over and Zaini is back!»

“There are no sacrifices when you love“. It is with these words that Olga Torri agrees to become Luigi Zaini's wife and mother of his two children, Piero and Rosetta, who have recently lost their mother. Luigi is a kind and discreet man with a big dream, a chocolate factory in Milan. And Olga falls in love with his kindness and chocolate scent, as well as with the dream of a company like Zaini, that she immediately makes her own. Between conches and mixers, roasting and cooling machines and tables of wrappers, the factory grows, expands - as does the family where Luisa and Vittorio arrive - and experiments with new and original products; but it especially becomes a point of reference for its workers, the shop boys and the many tuse, “girls” in Milanese dialect, fundamental and tireless workers who, with their cold hands, don't melt the chocolate. They are Ernestina, Ines, Emilia and many other young women who, with their dreams and fragilities, accompany the life of the factory and dedicate their destiny to it. Zaini is a family and, like a family, when Luigi dies prematurely in 1938, it stands beside Olga, who shows such courage and strength she herself is surprised. These are dramatic years, but among the rationing and autarchy, racial laws and bombs on Milan, that will hit Zaini hard as well, this little big company will manage to survive, to cherish the teachings of its founder and to keep on spreading the intense scent of its chocolate on the streets.

Giacinta Cavagna di Gualdana, through the fascinating and particularly humane story of a family and a factory, narrates half a century of the history of Milan, with the watchful eye of the art historian and the eyes of someone who deeply loves their city. An exciting novel on the resilience of women, on their capacity to lead a company and a family, in a period when Italy is going through war and so many dramatic changes.

An incredible story of female entrepreneurship, a compelling novel on the resilience of women, on their capacity to lead a company and a family, in a period when Italy is going through dramatic changes.

The story: Milan, 1923. The novel tells the story of one of the oldest chocolate factories in Milan, where the first blocks (chocolate bars) are wrapped in the workshop in Via De Cristoforis 6, opened by Luigi Zaini. From the 'Fabbrica di cioccolato, cacao, caramelle, confetture e affini' (Factory of chocolate, cocoa, candies, jams and similar) come the first chocolates, the first candies and the very first Boeri, until then imported. The world is greedy and success is quick. Production is constantly growing and space is soon too tight. In the mid-1920s, it was decided to move the factories to Dergano, a few steps away from Carlo Erba and Fernet Branca. In 1924, Luigi, a widower with two children, Piero and Rosetta, marries Olga Torri and soon Vittorio and Elisa are born, and with them arrives Emilia, who from then on helps the family and looks after the children. Emilia has a weakness for sweets: she never misses an opportunity to slip into the kitchen and experiment with some new recipe. The traditional Blocco Emilia, which can still be found on supermarket shelves today, is dedicated to the nanny. Suddenly the founder dies. It is 1938: the winds of war begin to blow heavily. On the death of her husband, Olga, not without worries and concerns, decides to take the reins of the family business and become director. Around her, the historical context becomes increasingly difficult and her choice to surround herself with female collaborators - both at home with the nanny Emilia and the cook Noemi, and in the factory with Ines as head of the commercial department and Clelia in administration, and giving work to many specialised female workers at the machines - will appear even stronger and more countercultural. In fact, the company will be nicknamed 'la fabbrica delle tuse' (in Milanese dialect 'beautiful girls') by all the local residents and not only them. During the Second World War, as the bombing of the city becomes more and more massive, worried for the safety of her family and employees, Olga decided to close the factory and leave the city: overnight she buys a house in Varese, where she will evacuate with her children and her closest employees. Zaini is destroyed, only the main walls remain. Olga does not lose heart and in a few months manages to rebuild everything; the workers leave cocoa and aromas for bricks and cement: it is they who are hired as bricklayers by the construction company, founded for the occasion. The adventure can continue and they start again from the Block, that old recipe - always a secret - that has won over entire generations. Olga runs the company until the mid-1950s when she hands the baton over to her two sons: Vittorio, appointed director, and Piero, in charge of foreign relations: he is "Uncle Piero», who writes the chocolate recipes to be put on the Block Emilia wrapping.

Giacinta Cavagna di Gualdana, an art historian and assistant at the University of Milan, conducts research on 20th century ceramics. Fascinated by the history of Milan, since 2010 she has been curating guided tours, both for adults and children, to discover the city and its masterpieces, through unusual itineraries. "The factory of the Tuse" is her debut novel.

THIS IS THE STORY OF HOW I RISKED DYING, EVEN BEFORE I WAS BORN, IN AN EXTERMINATION CAMP IN 1943.

It is the true story of two brothers, Alfredo and Franco, who are children during the years of fascism and teenagers when the Second World War breaks out.

In 1943, Alfredo, the eldest, who is 18, disappears into thin air. Franco, aged 16, decides to run away from home to look for him, crossing war-torn Europe. He discovers that he has been deported to Bergen Belsen concentration camp (Anne Frank's). After innumerable misadventures, after making false documents, being arrested by the SS and taken to Poland, after escaping and reaching Berlin under bombing, after meeting a Polish nurse, a German priest, an Italian prisoner and falling in love with an American soldier, he will eventually manage to find his brother. Together they manage to escape from the concentration camp and return to Italy.

The story is true, Alfredo was my grandfather. Waiting for him in Ravenna was his little girlfriend Ivana, who had never given up hope, and who would later become my grandmother. If he had not been saved, I would not be here.

Matteo Cavezzali, born in Ravenna, published his first novel with Minimum Fax, under the title Icarus. Ascesa e caduta di Raul Gardini in 2018, thanks to which he won the Premio Volponi Opera Prima/Premio Stefano Tassinari 2019. He has written texts for the theatre and collaborates with various newspapers and magazines. He founded and directs the literary festival Scrittura that takes place in Ravenna. In 2019 Mondadori published his Nero d'inferno and subsequently Il labirinto delle nebbie.

THE EPIC OF RUNNING, THE EPIC OF CHALLENGES, THE EPIC OF THE POLITICAL BATTLES OF THE 1970S: A FATHER AND SON CONFRONT EACH OTHER ON THE ROADS OF THE WORLD, TO TELL US WHAT THE DREAMS THAT KEEP US BETWEEN HEAVEN AND EARTH ARE MADE OF.

“HE WAS THE FORCE OF NATURE, THE INVINCIBLE, A KIND OF SUPERHERO AS I SAW HIM AS A BOY WHEN HE COMBED HIS HAIR WITH GREASE OR SHAVED WITH AN ELECTRIC RAZOR, HIS SCULPTED MUSCLES, THOSE INTENSE BLUE EYES THAT SHONE, THE MAN OF STEEL WHO NEVER STOPPED.”

The motivation of the Nomination for The Premio Strega 2025

“I am presenting Angelo Ferracuti's novel ‘Il figlio di Forrest Gump’ (Mondadori) at the 2025 edition of the Strega Prize, because it restores to family relationships, with their load of attraction and repulsion, the value of a public reflection. The coming-of-age novel of a young man who cannot manage anger and anxiety, becomes a moving reportage - a genre that Ferracuti has been practising with mastery for decades - of the environments where he grew up and which he is on the verge of abandoning, projecting himself outwards in search of a reconciliation out of time - or at least a contact, which can only take place in the space of literature.

Mental toughness, determination, loneliness belong to writing as much as to running long distances and they unite Angelo Ferracuti and his father Mario; a father who a few hours before his death, in a low voice, reiterates his wish that the son with whom he has always clashed should write about him. ‘Forrest Gump's son’ is the nickname some friends have given Angelo because of this father who, at a certain point in his life, started running and never seemed to stop, becoming the third Italian for marathons run, marching for 48 hours non-stop (303 km).” Lorenzo Pavolini

“Of the 1970s, The Son of Forrest Gump restores the climate, the moments of collective passion, the ardours and the most tremendous disappointments, the acidic sound from which moments of overwhelming tenderness were suddenly released. This, after all, is the paradox inscribed in every memoir, that of being an autobiographical text that, however, is not exhausted in the spaces of a preordained autobiography.” Massimo Raffaeli, Il Manifesto

It is not easy to have a sedentary, distant, sometimes hostile father, collected in himself, a clerk who seems to magnetize in himself the traits of a dull, democratic province. Yet that same father, having escaped parotid cancer, suddenly begins to run, and when he starts, he seems never to stop. In the city they call him “the one who runs,” and from his exploits on the roads of the Marche he is on his way to becoming a leading figure in the “marcialonga”, first national then international, marathon, and endurance marches. He becomes what his son, wrapped up in his rebellious youth, would never have suspected: a legend, the third Italian by number of races run. The small-town scoffs at him, but he doesn't care. We find him from time to time in Swiss valleys, Austria, Flemish plains, Dutch villages, Norway. After so much hostility and indifference, the son goes in search of a ghost who reappears magical and immense, larger than life, and he does so by traveling the paths his father has trodden and those that, before he consumed his time on earth, he would have liked to travel.

The epic of running, the epic of challenges, the epic of the political battles of the 1970s: a father and son confront each other on the roads of the world, to tell us what the dreams that keep us between heaven and earth are made of.

FIRST REPRINT AFTER ONE MONTH!

A FASCINATING STORY IN WORDS AND PICTURES THAT AIMS AT RENEWING THE TRADITION OF REPORTAGE, ON THE TRAIL OF GREAT MASTERS SUCH AS SEBASTIÃO SALGADO AND NORMAN LEWIS, THE AMERICAN JOURNALIST WHO, WITH "GENOCIDE" ("SUNDAY TIMES" 1969), EXPOSED THE TRAGEDY OF THE AMAZONIAN PEOPLES TO THE WHOLE WORLD.

"Crossing the borders of the Amazon rainforest, to its most hidden and dangerous depths, is a privilege reserved for a few. It takes courage, the right contacts, a pinch of healthy madness to enter the heart of that noisy silence called "the lung of the Earth", where uncontacted tribes still live, who want nothing to know about modernity, and animals that no biologist has so far labeled. The writer Angelo Ferracuti and the photographer Giovanni Marrozzini, with this reportage book, take the reader by the hand or push him to that last frontier." Sara Gandolfi, Corriere della Sera

"A reportage that is also an exploration of an extraordinary human culture that is increasingly at risk". Alberto Riva, Il Venerdì di Repubblica

For years the river world has been the magnificent obsession of Angelo Ferracuti and photographer Giovanni Marrozzini: a book came out of it, that, like the classic "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men" by James Agee and Walker Evans, is not afraid of expressing itself in two different languages, one independent from the other: literary reportage and story in pictures. They both aim at reaching the ancient heart of a devastated world on which our survival, as well as its own, nevertheless depends.

Angelo and Giovanni set up the motorboat Amalassunta and traveled up the largest river of the planet: they met the peoples living in the heart of the forest, some on the brink of extinction, others threatened by loggers, gold diggers, multinational oil companies. The more they move forward, the more you have the distinct feeling of hanging in the balance between the damages of exploitation and the dazzling remainders of many tenacious identities. Giovanni, attracted by the myths of creation, by the deep original cultures, by the ritual celebrations, leaves us with a tormented as well as magical vision of bodies, eyes, vegetation and water.

Angelo makes us feel the beauty of places and peoples threatened by oil companies, deforesting fazendeiros, far-right paramilitary groups.

Together with the degradation, the toxic waters, the drugs and the prostitution, the political intelligence of opponents emerges, as well as the critical exercise of those who won't give in, the stubborn resistance of the peoples: that of the Yanomami in Catrimani and of the leader Davi Kopenawa, that of the Waimiri Atroari, the revival of the Assembly of the Guaraní people in the Chaco, the militancy of Radio Ucamara in Nauta, Peru, the coexistence of twenty-three different indigenous ethnicities in São Gabriel da Cachoeira.

Fearless captains, Angelo and Giovanni left their Amalassunta to the Piccolo Nazareno Association, so that it could become a floating school - a new, small, form of resistance.

As Ryszard Kapuscinski says: "only when traveling a reporter feels at home».

And this is what happened to Angelo and Giovanni, fearless captains of the Amalassunta. From the river's mouth to its source, the trip renews and explores the urgency to get to know and bear witness to a world as doomed as it is determined to resist.

This trip has been documented throughout ten videos Viaggio nel fiume mondo "Journey on the river world":

"A harsh subject, sometimes unspeakable, but mysteriously touched by poetic grace." Venerdì di Repubblica

WITHOUT ANY PATHETICISM, FERRACUTI INVITES US INTO A STORY THAT BECOMES ALMOST OURS AND SHOWS, BETWEEN TORMENT AND HEAT, HOW MUCH LIFE THERE IS BEYOND THE LOSS OF SOMEONE YOU LOVE.

"Half of the sky is an incandescent and very moving book. It is necessary, like the earth on which we walk." Andrea Bajani, Il Manifesto

Inside the small community of a village in central Italy, within the looming sense of emptiness that follows the happy season of love and political commitment, the devastating grandeur of death enters the small affairs of family life. Patrizia, Angelo's wife, dies at the age of 42. He, obsessed by failures, economic and moral, moves uncertainly in the new present. Ten years have passed but his memory returns to the illness, how it manifested, how it dictated its protocol. The narration mixes, with staggered plans, the experience of pain and that of reconstruction, the appearance of a new female figure, provincial asphyxia, the escapes, the returns, and the oblivion of alcohol.

Angelo Ferracuti patiently pursues the facts, the crude cadence of facts, returns to the forms of desire, understanding, silences, and a newfound complicity. We are greeted with grace, without pathos, in a story that becomes almost ours and shows, between torment and heat, how much life there is beyond the loss of someone you love.

Angelo Ferracuti was born in 1960. He is the author of Attenti al cane ("Beware of the Dog", 2000), Le risorse umane ("Human Resources", 2006- winner of the "Sandro Onofri" prize), Viaggi da Fermo ("Travels from Fermo", 2009), Il costo della vita ("The Cost of Life", Einaudi, 2013, winner of "Lo Straniero" prize), Andare, camminare, lavorare ("Going, Walking, Working", Feltrinelli, 2015), Addio ("Farewell", Chiarelettere, 2016), La metà del cielo ("Half of the sky", Mondadori, 2019), Non ci resta che l'amore ("Love is all we have left", Saggiatore, 2021). «There are some family plots and secrets which children should not know, and yet they know everything! This is especially true of little girls, such as the protagonist of this novel who tears the veil of reality thanks to the grace and precision of a narrative voice which calls every single thing by its name»

Nadia Terranova

«What a story! Full of ferocity, adult lies and intricate political betrayals. The novel is full of twists and turns, but Gina's voice is like a bright Ariadne's thread guiding the reader on his journey of discovery. The prose is impeccable. Gina is a vibrant, dynamic character, full of life. I loved this book!»

Catherine Dunne

«A novel with a defined outline that stands out and overtakes us at high speed, leaving us deeply satisfied.» Claudia Durastanti

It is the 1980s, and little Gina is the daughter of a Christian-Democrat politician who is forced to leave his Neapolitan family behind to become a fugitive. Amidst terrorist attacks, secret meetings and an obstinate desire to see her father, with a candid and deadpan tone Gina narrates the life of a divided family and the thousands difficulties they encounter along the way, some of which she can barely comprehend.

Gina is ten years old, the daughter of a Christian-Democrat politician, Mario Carafa, who is forced to abandon his family in the summer of 1980 and run away from Naples. With her mother Sofia and her sister Betta, Gina spends the summer holidays under a false identity in Sardinia, where she is reunited with her father. Thanks to her passion for storytelling and new words, Gina does her best to comprehend what is happening to her family. For example, she seeks to decipher exotic terms, such as “Camorra mobster”, “terrorist” or “absconder”. But as soon as she seems to have grasped their meaning, she suddenly feels more and more confused: is her father innocent or guilty? Is he a politician or a member of the Camorra? Who are his friends, and who turned against him? Amidst family misunderstandings, teenage rebellion, new friendships, and adventures on board the ramshackle yellow Cinquecento, Gina overcomes this difficult time by improvising her own investigations about Mario Carafa. Her aim is to find out the real reasons behind her father's absconding and, above all, to bring him home once and for all.

Enrica Ferrara was born in Napoli but has lived in Dublin for over twenty years. She has published widely on topics of literature and film, such as Italo Calvino, Elena Ferrante, Natalia Ginzburg, Pier Paolo Pasolini and Domenico Starnone. She lectures at Trinity College Dublin and collaborates with the Italian Cultural Institute in Dublin. My Mother Had a Yellow Cinquecento is her debut novel.

I was ten years old when my mother left us. It was Shrove Tuesday and I had gone to school in my Snow White costume, I was so proud of my dress with its high lapels and puffed sleeves. On the way out my father's grey Hundred and Thirty One was waiting for me.

"How come you came?" I picked up the long yellow skirt and got into the car.

He hesitated, then said that my mother had had to leave suddenly and hadn't been able to say goodbye to me. A comrade of mine had been told the same thing when his mother had been run over by a lorry trailer.

"You mean she died?"

He looked at me dazed, his eyes glazed over. "What are you thinking?"

"Then where is she? When is she coming back?" The red headband in my hair itched, I pulled it off. "Has she gone to Turin? Is someone sick?"

My maternal grandparents and Alfredo, my mother's younger brother, lived in Turin.

"They're all fine," I sucked air into my nose, started the car and turned on the heater. A jet of warm air came out of the vents. "Listen, lying to you isn't doing anyone any good," he stared at the windscreen, I think looking me in the eye would have made it insurmountable for him. "Mom left. We had a fight and she left."

It was worse than being run over by a big horse with stones.

It is 1981, Isabella lives in Agrigento and is ten years old when her mother leaves the family. The child does not accept the separation and is under the illusion that her parents will get back together. The father, closed in his grief, concentrates on his work and, at the beginning of summer, sends his daughter to Turin to her maternal grandparents. Waiting for her in Turin are Alfonso, the uncle she is always a little in love with, her grandfather Pacifico and, above all, Antonia, the generous and immodest grandmother, brilliant and a liar, who cleans at the Einaudi publishing house and comes home every day with exceptional stories.

Antonia, sick at heart and blind in one eye, uses irony and imagination as antidotes to a life of renunciation, so she tells her granddaughter stories about writers she barely knows or has heard of: Calvino, Pavese, Ginzburg become the protagonists of the ambiguous and magnificent borderland between reality and imagination, where Isabella loses herself to finally find her deepest identity. As the weeks go by, Isabella interprets her father's and mother's distance as an absence of love for her, so she lies about her parents to discredit them and gets into more and more trouble. In spite of this, Antonia continues to stick up for her, the bond between grandmother and granddaughter grows stronger and stronger, especially now that Alfredo has turned his attentions to his fiancée, triggering a vindictive jealousy in the girl.

It is her indomitable imagination, in fact, that will lead her to a crazy and surprising gesture of rebellion, but one that is necessary to make peace with herself and the world of adults.

Natalia's Room is a coming-of-age novel in which the protagonist, Isabella, will have to come to terms with life, learn that broken ties must be patiently mended and that the way to find oneself is through courage

Monica Gentile, born in 1972, was born in Agrigento. After living for several years in Francia, the United Kingdom and Rome, she returned to Palermo where she lives and works. She attended the Lalineascritta creative writing workshops held by Antonella Cilento for several years. She made her debut in 2014 with Tira scirocco after receiving a mention at the Calvino Prize, and in 2019 she published the novel Cosa può salvarmi oggi.

A SURPRISING DEBUT, A NOVEL THAT EXCITES AND DISPLACES THE READER AT EVERY PAGE, BRINGING HIM IN A DIMENSION OF TOTAL EMPATHIZE WITH THE PROTAGONIST, WITH HIS ILLNESS, WITH HIS GRIEF

This is the story of a young and brilliant architect who at his thirties, is diagnosed Parkinson's. His life, the life of his friends and of course the life of his relatives and colleagues, is upside down; in a short time all of them, particularly the protagonist and narrator, undergo the attack of the mad hurricane that disrupt the action and thoughts. The drugs with their "undesiderable effects" and the disease progresses, quickly transform his existence in a succession of events, real and imaginary, in which the order of things and logic give way to chaos and irrationality.

The undesiderable effects* is a kaleidoscopic and moving novel, schizophrenic and sometimes ironic, often lyrical, always engaging.

Parkinson's is a neurodegenerative disease. The average age of onset is around 58-60 years, but about 5% of patients may have a juvenile onset between 21 and 40 years. The protagonist of this novel belongs to that 5%.

“Perhaps I was no longer able, as before, to walk or to think in a common manner, especially for a long period of time; but in those few moments of lucidity, I wanted to use them to run away from fate that someone had written for me.

I did not want to heal, I never claimed so much.

I just wanted to have the opportunity to live, being sick.”

Roberta Gentile was born in Verona in 1970 and she is living in Rome since 1972. She is an architect and a couple of years ago, on her bloc note, began to appear near the drawings and the notes of the meetings, the first few pages of her debut novel.

AN INVESTIGATIVE NOVEL SPANNING ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF HISTORY RECOUNTING THE LIFE, ESCAPES, CAPTURE, TRIALS AND DEATH OF
ERICH PRIEBKE, THE EXECUTIONER OF THE FOSSE ARDEATINE.

A SYNOPSIS OF THEMATIC STRENGTHS IS AVAILABLE

FIRST REPRINT AFTER ONE WEEK!

On 6 May 1994, Erich Priebke's face appears on television, caught on camera as he tries to explain that he was only carrying out orders at the Fosse Ardeatine. It is then that magistrate Antonino Intelisano sees him. It is then that a partisan, Carla Angelini, calls another partisan, Maria Teresa Regard, to tell her: It's him, it's him, the one from Via Tasso. It was then that I heard his name for the first time.

There is a man in Bariloche, a town in the foothills of the Andes not far from the Chilean border, who wakes up every day, eats breakfast, leaves his house, goes to the German school where he teaches, lectures to the kids and goes home to his wife for lunch. He has lived there for almost fifty years, is perfectly integrated, respected, has a solid network of friendships.

On 4 April 1994, however, outside the school he finds an American TV crew waiting for him. "Mr Priebke?" asks the journalist.

The other remains impassive, watching the journalist without understanding.

"You were in the Gestapo in '44, right? In Rome?"

The man seems to think about it, then nods.

It seems unbelievable but that old teacher is really Erich Priebke, the German police captain who on 24 March 1943 called out the names of the 335 innocent people who were taken to the Fosse Ardeatine in Rome to be shot. He himself killed two of them.

How did an international wanted man escape from Italy and take refuge in South America? How is it possible that he lived undisturbed for half a century without anyone asking him about his crimes? With monumental research work, a passionate series of interviews with key people in the story and the help of previously unpublished material, The Executioner tells three stories: that of Priebke's incredible capture, the trials, the uprising in the courtroom at the first acquittal, the conviction and imprisonment in an Italy deeply divided between those who demanded justice for the terrible massacre and those who instead pleaded for clemency for a man who was now elderly; that of Priebke's life, from his career in the SS in Rome to his role as a predator of partisans and Jews, and his daring escape to Argentina after the fall of the Reich; and finally a story of roots: Those of today's Italy, with its contradictions and antagonisms that have never been overcome, and of Antonio Iovane, who, while writing, investigating and entering the black heart of history, found himself faced with a disturbing truth.

Antonio Iovane was born on 18 May 1974 in Rome, where he lives. A journalist, he worked for a long time at Radio Capital. He currently produces investigative podcasts for the Gedi group's newspapers. He published the novel Il brigatista (2019), which was a great success with critics and the public, and La seduta spiritica (2021), both published by Minimum Fax. In 2022, Strade Blu series - Mondadori, published Un uomo solo, the immersive and sparkling account of Luigi Tenco's last hours, in an edition of Sanremo that is impossible to forget.

THE LAST HOURS OF LUIGI TENCO, THE MOST MOURNED SINGER AND SONGWRITER OF ITALIAN MUSIC, TAKE THE STAGE IN THIS HEARTBREAKING AND POETIC NOVEL. A COLLECTIVE WOUND IN THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF A COUNTRY VERY GOOD AT CELEBRATING ITS MYTHS, LESS AT MAKING AMENDS FOR HOW IT TREATED THEM.

“It’s just a lifeless body on the ground, eyes to the ceiling, shirt open, jacket open, white undershirt, two blood rivulets from the mouth and nose trickling down the side and cutting his cheeks in two, there is evidence of a large blood stain and brain matter on the right side of the head and also around it, and now they’re about to arrive, the door is ajar and they’re about to arrive, who will be the first to see all this, to drop the bomb, there is evidence of a gunshot entry wound in the right temporal region, they’re about to arrive but nobody has rushed here yet, how is it possible, how could Lucio Dalla or Sandro Ciotti or the Les Compagnons de la Chanson not hear the gunfire, not hear anything, whether sleeping or awake, they are all in the next rooms and it’s nighttime, it’s the middle of the night, someone should have realized that he shot himself, that Luigi Tenco shot himself, the position of the body is clearly a consequence of the suicidal gunshot wound from a standing position to the fall to the ground, who will be the first to notice the door left ajar, to come in and scream until the room will become a sea port, populated by singers, friends, journalists, inspector Arrigo Molinari, undertakers, and what will happen will happen, who will be the first, who is about to walk through the door, who?”

This is the opening of this non-fiction novel, heartbreaking and beautiful, that brings back to the present the figure of Luigi Tenco.

Sanremo, January 26, 1967. The Riviera is buzzing with excitement for the Sanremo Music Festival. Journalists are talking about a different edition, of the clashing of the old guard and the new faces: there’s Claudio Villa and Little Tony, Ornella Vanoni and Lucio Dalla. And there’s Luigi Tenco. Tenco is more recognized as an author of other artists’ successes than as a singer, and not everybody likes him, also because of the scornful, at times offensive terms he does not avoid using when speaking of his colleagues. He is at the Festival with the stated hope of having his talent recognized by the audience, but most of all to show that it is possible to make popular music more meaningful than Villa’s but less rhetorical than Mogol’s, speaking to everyone about things that concern everyone and that no one wants to talk about - divorce, indifference. But as the hours go by, Tenco starts to fear that it was a mistake to come to Sanremo. The last rehearsals are a disaster, Tenco gets upset, he drinks, he takes a tranquilizer. When he steps onstage he is resigned, the performance stumbles; the verdict of the audience is disheartening. Tenco is left hanging onto the repêchage, but with a takeover the director of Radiocorriere tv insists on saving Gene Pitney's song. Tenco seems to accept it, but his rage builds up instead. He refuses to have dinner with his friends, he closes himself in his room...

He is found already cold the next morning, by Dalida. The investigation is hasty, at times grotesque. But most of all, the record and RAI (Italian Radiotelevision) executives won't stop the festival, so a parade of unnecessary viciousness and repressed spite goes onstage, not sparing anyone, not even Claudio Villa, who actually based his success on good feelings. And while Valentino, Tenco's brother, is taking away his brother's body, the host Mike Bongiorno announces the beginning of the second night of the festival, without even calling Luigi Tenco by name.

FOCUS

1. Antonio Iovane, one of the most respected voices of contemporary narrative non-fiction, mixes interviews, testimonies and meticulous archive research - in a long, uninterrupted sequence, he recounts the last day in the life and the first after the death of the famous singer-songwriter who died on January 27, 1967, during the Sanremo Music Festival.
2. A lonely man is not another conspiracy theory book that denounces the mysteries surrounding Tenco's alleged suicide, but a true portrait of a unique musician, whose affliction, distress, remorse, regret and contradictions are told - a timeless artist.
3. Not only Tenco: in Iovane's pages, the words and actions of many famous faces of Italian Music vibrate, from Giorgio Gaber to Lucio Dalla, from Claudio Villa to Little Tony - a non rethorical collective photograph revealing the truth, terrible at times, on the most shameful show-must-go-on incident that Italian TV has ever staged.

"The tragic death of Luigi Tenco has been told for 55 years. Even though, Antonio Iovane in his A lonely man, brings the story back to the surface as perhaps it has never been done before. It looks like a film, but it is a novel, a flow where it enters everything: quotes from newspapers, statements, interviews, verses of songs that the invention merges with thoughts. Venerdì di Repubblica

"Never before has a novel been written on the tragedy of Luigi Tenco [...] everything is told through Tenco's thoughts in a whirlwind, obsessive and beating writing that returns his inner torment". La Stampa

"The most wonderful failure is a verse by Federico García Lorca. And it is a sentence that more than any other could describe the short life and the infinite death. And from this sentence starts the novel by Antonio Iovane". La Repubblica

"Based on the chronicles of the time and clips of interviews, Antonio Iovane follows Tenco in the last hours of his life to restore the value of man and artist. As if to suggest that the singer-songwriter from Piemonte deserves to be disturbed not by virtue of his tragic gesture but for the singularity of his vocation." Il Fatto Quotidiano

Antonio Iovane, writer and journalist, was born on May 18, 1974 in Rome, where he lives. For many years he hosted a radio program (Capital newsroom) together with Ernesto Assante on Radio Capital. Now he is part of the staff of the newspaper "la Repubblica" and focuses on investigations. With Minimum Fax in 2019 he published the novel Il brigatista ("The Red Brigade militant"), that obtained great success from audiences and critics followed by La seduta spiritica ("The Seance") in April 2021.

THIRTY YEARS AFTER THE FIRST EDITION, ONE OF THE MOST POWERFUL ITALIAN NOVELS ON THE WORLD OF WORK RETURNS TO BOOKSHOPS. A BOOK THAT SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN WRITTEN YESTERDAY - OR RATHER, TOMORROW.

«And if you confess to someone how much they pay you, you reveal your value. The pay packet is a kind of universal judgement.»

«I have always said that. For me, strippers are like bullfights for Hemingway. Only after what happened to me at work and with Laura even there, I don't enjoy it. I participate nothing. I get distracted. A catastrophe. Better times will come, though. Michele Garbo's great revenge. The games have just begun. I bend but do not break. »

NO ONE HAD TOLD US WHAT DIES BEHIND THE MIRRORED GLASS OF THE BUILDINGS WHERE MONEY RULES; NO ONE HAD UNCOVERED THE SKULL OF AN EMPLOYEE TO SHOW US WHAT HELL BURNS THERE

The grip of work that creates dependency, the mechanism that alienates and resets identities and dreams. Between grotesque and tragedy, one of the most incisive stories of the 1990s.

«The employee is the first-person confession of a manager with a goal too big for him. Michele Garbo only fools around with this goal, and ends up daydreaming about triumphs that are destined to remain hypothetical. His private life is a disaster. His profession only repays him with stress and humiliations to break professionals more solid than himself. In all this, Michele Garbo never redeems himself. Never a gesture of pride, courage or even true affection. He is a perfectly, incredibly mean man. »

Aurelio Magistà - Il Venerdì di Repubblica

«The end of the employee is not the dismissal: if he is really an employee, that is, one who has his life outside himself, he is already finished when he is hired, when he works, when everything goes well. In 'The Employee' Michele Garbo's dense, compact, streamlined novel, Sebastiano Nata's first work, tells precisely the end. The loss of work as a loss of life, physically: as death. » Ferdinando Camon - La Stampa

«The reader witnesses the destruction of an individual who, killed in his humanity, slips into degrading and brutal living practices. But at this point the (naive) reader asks himself: but is not the victim himself, with his desire to make himself important and wealthy, somehow responsible for such ferocity and destruction? How naive!, that reader replies, and (with naive eggs) adds: this life we live is so intimately repressive that it prevents us from choosing. You cannot avoid going to the slaughter. » Angelo Guglielmi - L'espresso

«To approach it with the tools of the moralist - an approach encouraged by the author himself - Il Dipendente, Sebastiano Nata's debut novel, could be read as a sort of apologue: a violent indictment of contemporary society (hegemony of profit, crisis of the couple, vinification of values), which inevitably leads, through the iron mechanisms of its internal logic, to the self-destruction of the individual. »
Stefano Giovanardi - La Repubblica

Michele Garbo is the manager of an international credit card company, Transpay. Working for such a multinational has its advantages: high salaries, luxury company cars, benefits of all kinds. But time for oneself is scarce, and projects follow one another non-stop at a gruelling pace. In the press of tasks and responsibilities, Michele unconditionally accepts his role as 'employee' and tries to win the trust of his superior. But if his work successes, although frenetic, can gratify him, the night in Rome allows no escape, and Michele finds himself having to come to terms with a broken marriage, with a daughter who has moved to Brazil to be away from him, and with the relationship that has just ended with Laura, who has kicked him out of the house to get involved with a woman. Lonely, clinging to the anxiety of having to produce, to produce more and more, Michele lives in a hotel and spends his nights inside his Audi, inside red-light clubs, inside nameless prostitutes, until the day when a misstep, a single misstep, leads to his dismissal. Disenchanted, raw and melancholic, The Employee is a novel that takes a bite out of the myth of work and delves into the darkest darkness of a society that has put production first. There is anger in Nata's novel, an unquenchable rage that demands justice against a world that judges its inhabitants on the basis of their work achievements.

Sebastiano Nata was born in Rome in 1955. He made his debut with Il dipendente (1995 Theoria, 1997 Feltrinelli, 2025 Feltrinelli) which was a literary case. He then published La resistenza del nuotatore (1999, winner of the Premio Mastronardi Città di Vigevano), Mentre ero via (2004), Il valore dei giorni (2010), all with Feltrinelli. With Barney Edizioni he published La mutazione (2014) and with Atlantide Tenera è l'acqua (2020). A manager in various international technology companies, he is now active in the Third Sector. He conceived the Mastercard Literature Prize and is chairman of its Steering Committee. He is one of the founding partners of Edizioni di Atlantide. His latest novel is Memorie di un infedele (Bompiani, February 2023).

MASSAROSA AWARD 2023 FOR THE DEBUT NOVEL

WITH THE FRESH AND IMAGINATIVE PROSE THAT HAD ENCHANTED THE READERS OF DASVIDANIA, HIS DEBUT NOVEL, NIKOLAI PRESTIA TELLS THE DISCOMFORT OF YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE INEVITABILITY OF BEING CRUSHED BY THE EXPECTATIONS OF OTHERS AND BY THEIR LOVE.

«Around me the average age is low only for cemeteries. I open my eyes. I have kept them wide open most of the time, only now do I feel I have them under control. The images I can comprehend, they flow unimpeded, they don't come back and they don't overlap. The valium must have taken effect. "Listen, what about calling me the nurse?" the lady lying on the crib next to my gurney asks me. I ignored her, bringing my left hand to my face to hide. I would like to disappear.»

A NOVEL ABOUT OUR PRESENT IN WHICH FRAGILITY IS A CAUSE OF SHAME.

“With straightforward prose, Prestia recounts the inadequacy, the fear of disappointment, the fear of failure of more than one generation, to whom success continues to be told in terms of speed, money or popularity. “ Internazionale , Nadeesha Uyangoda

After a panic attack, Marco is admitted to the emergency room. He cannot speak, he is confused, and while all around him the other hospitalized patients mark time with their complaints, a psychologist takes care of him by inviting him to go over his past. Inside, Marco has many things, but mostly the pains, falsehoods and failures collected during his university studies in Siena. The stream of consciousness in which he plunges is punctuated by his last four cigarettes, with a promise, when the story is finished, to quit smoking. He then recalls his brilliant college career, until that failed exam that gradually turned into emotional and social discomfort. To escape the weight of reality, he invented a parallel world in which he was still keeping up with exams. Having come to the brink, he confessed everything to his father and grandfather - managers of a restaurant in the same small Calabrian village that Marco had left years earlier to move to and enroll in law school - and, finally light, resumed his studies. It was then that he met a girl who was a victim of his own lies. They promised each other never to lie to each other, and especially to finish their studies together. However, if Marco managed to graduate, the same cannot be said of her. And now, within the bare walls of the emergency room in which he is hospitalized, Marco must come to terms with the traumas of his own past, but also - and perhaps above all - with his own future, which awaits him in another ward, a few rooms away. Plants Consciousness tells of the anger of living in an age where the result is worth more than the path, and where speed is the only parameter by which we all, more or less consciously, judge success. With the fresh and imaginative prose that enchanted readers in Dasvidania, his debut novel, Nikolai Prestia - a young Zeno who wants to quit smoking and tries to understand what is happening to our future - tells of youthful discomfort and the inevitability of being crushed by the expectations and love of others.

Nikolai Prestia, was born in Nizhny Novgorod, Russia, in August 1990. At the age of eight, he was adopted by a Sicilian couple together with his sister. A law graduate from Siena, he now lives in Rome. He made his debut with the novel Dasvidania (Marsilio, 2021), Massarosa Prize 2022, a memoir about his childhood in Russian orphanages.

AN UNSETTLING AND MAGNETIC NOVEL ABOUT THE DARK ENERGIES SURROUNDING EVERY DISAPPEARANCE.

A NOVEL THAT CANNOT GO UNNOTICED.

«A natural and surprising style in dark and unsettling colors, that is far from elaborate but nonetheless full of emotion, that aims at reaching all readers»

Andrea Gentile – editorial director of "Il Saggiatore"

My sister is a debut in which the simplicity of the style manages to accumulate a fibrillating narrative tension where the horror seems sweet, at first glance, and instead manages to frighten through a gradual solidity in the power of distorting reality. With intelligent and measured passion, Fosca Salmaso appears to have read and chewed the psychological novels of Joyce Carol Oates - such as Black Water - but, in particular, a book like Lizzie by another great American author, Shirley Jackson. Corriere della Sera

"In Salmaso's novel Matilda's death plays as an incubator and generator of centrifugal trajectories that end up mixing with supernatural elements linked to a status of reality that homogeneously mixes the world of the living and that of the dead". L'Indice dei Libri

It must have been at that point, when she lowered her eyes and saw the pool spreading on the marble floor, under her belly, that my mother started to believe that water is the element that ruins things. My father didn't immediately understand what was going on. He was chewing on the salmon when he saw my mother getting up and just standing there, eyes wide open in shock while staring at the restaurant floor. Did death walk past you, he asked her - in my family that's what you used to say when someone was caught staring at something -, and she shook her head, she shook her head and started to cry, because she knew he would be ashamed of her.

That's the first thing that came to her mind, when her waters broke. That my father would be ashamed of her.

Since her twin sister died in front of her eyes in a tragic accident at sea, young Alice is completely alone: her father left the family, her mother closed herself in grief, her friends and classmates drifted away. The girl spends her days between home and school, surrounded by silence and the outbursts of her mother - who seems to accuse her of surviving her twin - and by the sound of the waves lapping the island she lives on.

One day, Egle joins her class. Egle who appeared out of nowhere. Egle who never speaks. Egle who is so similar to her sister. When her new classmate asks her if she can stop by and pick up some notes, Alice can't believe that someone could actually come bring a breath of fresh air to their apartment which her mother has turned into a suffocating memorial, with framed pictures, untouchable relics and rooms where it is forbidden to enter.

What Egle doesn't know is that every time a storm is raging the communication lines between the islands are interrupted, so at the first drops of rain she will be stuck there, indefinitely, «prisoner» of the two women. But what Alice doesn't know is that inside Egle shines an evil and mysterious shadow: a shadow that connects her to Matilde with a ghostly thread, and that will grow, hour after hour, until it will envelop everything.

Fosca Salmaso debuts with a novel where the familiar and phantasmic echoes of Shirley Jackson live. My sister guides the reader though the threshold between an imponderable reality and a seductive insanity, between the land of the living and the abyss of the unknown; on that line between the night and its double that can be crossed only by stepping on the ashes of a sacrifice.

"My sister is a promising young author's debut novel. Fosca Salmaso, twenty-five years old, was born in Venice on a «rainy day», as she herself likes to tell.

Upon the very first reading of the manuscript, it is impressive how limpid and refined her voice is. The imagination shaping this novel works as a power cable: a number of images flow through it like electric flickers, until a switch is turned on and everything lights up. There's an island, on this island there's a house, in this house live two women, mother and daughter, devastated by grief. The one for the loss of the other twin sister, drowned at sea a few years back, whose death destroyed the family: the father left, the mother buried herself in an obsessive heartbreak, the surviving twin cannot move on. A story where almost exclusively women appear on the scene: women damaged by life, desperate and at the same time waiting for something, women bound by blood and silence, ghosts that are still living. Until someone arrives in their empty and faded house: a new woman, another young girl coming from nowhere, kind, affectionate, through whom - maybe - all that was lost can be found again. A natural and surprising style in dark and unsettling colors, that is far from elaborate but nonetheless full of emotion, that aims at reaching all readers. A story that takes us to the most intimate heart of our contemporary world, in all its moods and contrasting sentiments. A story that belongs to everyone, magnetic and fast-paced, told by a new voice that will spur talks, discussions, that will scare you and make you fall in love."

Andrea Gentile – editorial director of "Il Saggiatore"

Fosca Salmaso was born in Venice in 1996. She left her island after high school to go work as a bartender in the UK and then moved to Turin, where she got her Master's degree in Storytelling & Performing Arts at Scuola Holden.

She is co-author of the play Fred dal whiskey facile ("Whiskey-happy Fred") and of the script of the independent short film Sangue – Del ventre tuo ("Blood - Of your womb"), based on one of her short stories. She worked as a freelance copywriter. Three of her short stories have been exhibited at Fondazione Ricerca Molinette. My sister is her first novel. My sister is her debut novel.

WITH A DRY AND PRECISE LANGUAGE, THE NOVEL TELLS US ABOUT THE CHANGES THAT LISA FACES IN SOLITUDE, THE DISCOVERY OF AN EARLY SEXUALITY, DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, THE VIOLENT AND DEGRADED CONTEXT OF THE DORMITORY NEIGHBORHOOD WHERE SHE FINDS HERSELF, BUT ALSO THE DISCOVERY OF LOVE, THE NURTURING OF FRIENDSHIP, AND THAT TIRELESS SEARCH FOR CONNECTIONS THAT WILL GIVE MEANING AND A TURNING POINT TO HER LIFE.

FROM A SEASIDE TOWN IN LIGURIA TO THE OUTSKIRTS OF TURIN, A YOUNG GIRL FINDS HERSELF IN A HARSH AND DIFFICULT REALITY THAT SHE CANNOT QUITE UNDERSTAND. AMID SOCIAL DISTRESS, DRUGS AND SMALL-SCALE CRIME, ONLY FRIENDSHIP AND A YOUNG LOVE WILL BE ABLE TO SAVE THE FRAIL.

"Lisa thought that children's dreams should be pastel-coloured: kindergartens, giant flowers, dinosaurs, toys, Play-Doh, swings and slides; but if suddenly in the dream appeared broccoli, scolding or tricycle thefts, at that point they would start kicking and moaning and everything would turn black at night. The boys, on the other hand, dream in technicolour and the old men in a stark black and white, myopic outline."

Those fabulous '80s. When something brakes, can it ever go back to the way it was before? This is what Lisa wonders, and in her twelve-year-old turmoil she tries to convince herself that yes, everything can go back to the way it was before. You simply have to pretend nothing is wrong, try not to think about it. But sometimes, not even this is enough to survive.

Turin, the end of the 1980s. Lisa is a shy girl who, after her parents' separation, has moved together with her mother and younger brother from a beach town to a run-down neighborhood. Besides having to start a new life from scratch, she now has to deal with a mother who delegates the responsibility of her brother to her, who is not capable of caring for her and forces her to live with a new, dangerous lover. Abruptly catapulted without any footholds, she tries to fit in the new environment by taking on the behavior and language of her peers, until she makes friends with some of them, like “Crazy Horse” Alex. It’s them who become the pivot of the story, and it’s them who will search for a way out.

With a dry and precise style, the novel describes the changes that Lisa faces on her own, her early sexual awakening, the neglect of the neighborhood she lives in, but also her hopes and dreams, the discovery of love, the care for friendship, and that endless search for bonds that will give meaning and mark a turning point in her life.

Erika Anna Savio was born in Turin in 1976, and grew up in the Mirafiori Sud area, under the chimney stacks of Fiat. She graduated in Modern Literature at university and has been a journalist since 2013, continuing to delve into the life of the suburbs with her two social research and territorial commentary books Mirafiori Sud, vita e storie oltre la fabbrica (“Mirafiori Sud, life and stories beyond the factory”), and Mirafiori Nord, la fabbrica del cambiamento (“Mirafiori Nord, the factory of change”, Graphot Editore, 2014 and 2017), created and written together with urban planner Federico Guiati. A few of her unpublished short stories have been mentioned in literary prizes and published in magazines. She teaches Italian in middle school. Young Boys And Girls Dream In Technicolor is her debut novel.

THE LATEST NOVEL BY THE 2019 CALVINO PRIZE WINNER

Proposed for the PREMIO STREGA 2024 by Giuseppe Lupo with this motivation:

It is increasingly rare to come across a novel that is rooted in invention rather than an account of reality, whether public or private. Ludmilla and the Raven is one of these very welcome exceptions. It all begins with an anecdote: a girl is crying because she has lost a doll and Franz Kafka, to console her, invents the story of a series of letters that the doll has written for her. It is the beginning of a tightrope adventure on the trail of a text that came out of the pen of the great Prague writer, an apocryphal book, presumed, perhaps never existed, strenuously pursued by an Istanbul scholar in love with Portugal. Gennaro Serio's novel thrives on this imagination, it is a hymn to writing that restores to the page the transparency of a vivid and visionary light, nourishes it with literary echoes, suggestions of a childhood, investigations into the true and the false, two sides of the same coin that gives value to existence.

SELECTED BY THE CAMPIELLO PRIZE 2023 LITERARY JURY

FROM THE AUTHOR OF NOCTURNE OF GIBRALTAR, A NOVEL OF UNBRIDLED IMAGINATION.

LUDMILLA AND THE RAVEN IS THE TALE OF A PRICELESS DISCOVERY FOR THE HISTORY OF LITERATURE: THE FOURTH NOVEL BY FRANZ KAFKA, DER RABE.

«One with a voice like that makes all the difference.»
Paolo di Paolo - Venerdì di Repubblica

«I listened to the bewitching music of Gennaro Serio with great respect and true gratitude on behalf of the neglected companion Literature.» Sandra Petrigiani

«In September 1923, while walking in a park in Berlin, Dora and Franz came across a crying little girl, inconsolable at the offer of a caress and even an ice cream. Kafka asked the little girl what could have given her so much grief. The little girl said she could no longer find her doll, the one she had shared so many hours of happiness with. She thought she had lost it in the park. Kafka almost cried, Dora said, but without being noticed by the little girl. He said, I know where your doll is. How do you know, the little girl asked. She wrote me a letter for you, said Kafka, I have it at home, if you want I'll go and get it. Yes? asked the little girl, really? Yes, take it, please. My name is Franz, Kafka introduced himself. I'm Ludmilla, answered the little girl. »

An Icelandic academic sits in the shade of a veranda overlooking the vineyards of Coimbra. He holds his hand resting on a bundle of yellowed papers, believed to exist only in the most reckless fantasies of literary critics in the world. If it were what it seems, there would be recounted the long journey of a doll, hunted by elusive figures, who keep her away from the love of her life: the raven. Numerous manuscript hunters have for decades set out in search of those phantom pages, pursued in vain between circus tents, inviolable safes and rough translations. It is rumored that it could be the legendary novel that Franz Kafka supposedly wrote to console a crying little girl he met during a walk in the park in September 1923. Gennaro Serio takes this real-life episode from the life of the great Prague writer and, with iridescent prose and humour-dense inventiveness, transforms it into a relentless narrative play. Ludmilla and the Raven is a fairy-tale novel, compelling and stubbornly far-fetched, a feast of fiction that celebrates the imaginative power of literature.

PRESS REVIEW OF HIS DEBUT NOVEL

«A detective story in its own right [...] that contrasts the increasingly consumerist levels of the genre with a novel of great pleasure and enjoyment, refined structure and writing.»

Ermanno Paccagnini, La Lettura

«Truly a happy pen that of Gennaro Serio. Like his hyper detective, inside he is just everyone else, he is a reckless troublemaker who constructs a literary detective story, a disruptive and, at times, impertinent adventure novel. With a broad, happily disrespectful style, as happens only to talented young people or great old men.»

Marcello Fois, Tuttolibri

«It is not often that one comes across a debut of such surprising and in some ways disarming quality, when referring to an author who is barely thirty years old, and yet shows an already defined physiognomy and, in the meantime, a complete mastery of his own linguistic-stylistic means.»

Massimo Raffaeli, Alias

«A funambulist, free, experimental, very brave work [...], a personal tribute to literariness and a labyrinth of stories in which one has the pleasure of getting lost, without wanting to get out.»

La Repubblica

Gennaro Serio was born in Naples in 1989; he has lived in Naples, Rome, Paris, and Athens, where he currently resides. After graduating in political science in Naples (Federico II), and a master's degree in journalism in Rome (Luiss). As journalist, he collaborates with "Alias Domenica," the Sunday literary insert of Il Manifesto and with "Il Venerdì di Repubblica." With his first novel, Notturmo di Gibilterra (L'Orma, 2020), he won the Italo Calvino Prize 2019, and was critically acclaimed. Ludmilla and the Raven is his second novel.

AS FAR AS I'M CONCERNED I'M ALWAYS IN LOVE IS A SENTIMENTAL BILDUNGSROMAN, WRITTEN WITH A SENSE HUMOR THAT RECALLS OF THE EARLY WOODY ALLEN MOVIES OR THE NOVELS BY DIEGO DE SILVA

Ugo loves women. The problem is that he does not understand them. He is an eternal student who spend the time in his basement daydreaming romantic encounters with idealized women from the fairy tales. But in real life, he only meets silly, empty women who disappoint him. When, after graduation he finally decides to leave his city in search of better fortune, Ugo finds himself in a reality only apparently different from the one he has left home. What lies behind an attractive girl smile? What is there behind her seductive eyes? Is there a fawn-eyed girl or an experienced seductress? Ugo does not know it and his attempts to seduce women are always a disaster. And his love affairs always end up with a goodbye or a slamming door. The women run into his life as the end credits of a movie. Until the day when a girl breaks his heart. Many readers will identify with Ugo's vulnerability. He is a victim of his own delusions and frustrations.

"With funny style and very suitable for a television transposition (the trend is Tutti matti per amore) Settimj sketches out a captivating plot." La Repubblica

"The Sandro Settimj novel discovered thanks to a starting effect." Venerdì di Repubblica

"A burst of (intelligent) laughs and sentimental and enlightening reflections." Marie Claire Sandro Settimj is 50 years old and works as a writer for RAI; he writes TV scripts and screenplays. In the past, after a degree in languages, he decided to work as a teacher and entertainer at Holiday camps across the world. This is his first novel.

«The novel is beautifully written. The narrator's voice is compassionate and intimate. It is also unsparing, both in the portrait of Rosa, and of her daughter. Rosa – faults and all – is not a character to be easily forgotten.» Catherine Dunne.

«What I loved of this novel is the tone, the perfect focus on the character of the mother, the true and complicated love narrated in the plot. » Helena Janeczek

«A powerful novel, even carnal, violent for some aspects but of absolute and powerful truth. And what measures its value is the way that forces the reader to confront himself with the universal truths that belong to everyone. » Emanuela Canepa

« A novel that investigates feelings of fears and courage in a deep and full of grace way. Some parts are so beautiful to leave you breathless. » Mariapia Veladiano

At the end of the 50s, Rosa moves from the south to the north of Italy. She is an intransigent woman, a fighter. She teaches to her daughter – who narrates the story – which the first commandment that a woman must obey is: «Don't cry. » And she is also Francesco's mother who for an accident, occurred immediately after his childbirth suffers from a severe disability. She fights to make her son's life better and her existence soon becomes a fight for the rights of the weakest. Rosa, in the novel, is a mother and her daughter tells the story; but it is even, simply, Italy: Italy still confused from the war of the 50s, the euphoric years of the 60s, the ones swirling of the 70s, the ones privatized of the 80s and the ones emptied of the 90s.

An Italy, Rosa, challenged: by a husband from whom she chooses to escape, by a son's disability, by a daughter where their relationship is as tight as confrontational, by the social and political changes that surrounds her. But also her daughter, that remembers and narrates, is Italy: today's Italy, the one that does not intend to give up its history, and that wants to create a new one. Try to do good things is the story of a woman, of a family and it's a political novel, if politics is the struggle to fight

A FASCINATING LITERARY AND METAPHYSICAL
 MYSTERY WITH AT ITS CENTRE
 JAMES JOYCE AND GIORDANO BRUNO

«But do you know, do you understand why Joyce ultimately owes almost everything to this place here?», the other asked him.

«To Rome, you mean?». The old man twirled his pulpy arm as if to point to the airy dome that watched over the city.

«Just read his book of the dead». The professor noticed a certain turmoil in the young man's eyes, and as if to hearten him, he went: «You are not the only one who does not know about it. Very few people have read it delving deep down without stopping at its intricate veneer. Not many of my colleagues master it either. They write about it, they write articles and books about it, but they have never really read it. Because it is a book of secrets, and academics are not interested in secrets. It is the book of the dead, the Wake, but of those who come back to life. Like vampires. And do you know why? Because this is where the dead are reborn».

This fascinating first novel by Enrico Terrinoni, full of literary references and arcane suggestions, sees the intersecting fortunes of two Roman scholars, master and pupil, grappling with an enigma centred on the brief period spent in Rome, at the beginning of the 20th century, by the great Irish writer James Joyce.

The old professor, an outsider in the academy, has always considered literature a mysterious, sapiential space, capable of providing absolute revelations. And he believes that Joyce's works contain an unspeakable secret, that they are the casket of dangerous truths. So, during his last course before retiring, he tries to involve three students in his oracular theories: a shy and serious young man who will later become a professor and take his place to continue his unfinished research, a girl who will have an intense relationship with him, and a boy of Magyar origin destined to become a famous noir writer.

The three will gradually make a series of discoveries that on the one hand confirm the old man's theories, and on the other enrich them with new mysteries, perhaps leading them to unravel the hidden connection between a secret dimension in the artist's works and the obscure paths indicated by the writings of Giordano Bruno, whose reincarnation Joyce himself felt Mysterious, perturbing, cultured and hallucinatory, A Beautiful Nothing is a novel that is unique and completely in its own right on the international literary scene.

Enrico Terrinoni is Professor in Residence at the National Italian Academy “Lincei”. He holds the Chair of English Literature at the University for Foreigners in Perugia and teaches Translation at the IULM University in Milan. In 2019 he was 'Visiting Professor' at the University of Notre Dame and in 2022 he was 'Visiting Professor' at the National Normal Taiwan University. Previously he had been 'Mendel Fellow' at the Lilly Rare Manuscripts Library, University of Indiana, 'Research Fellow' at University College Dublin, and 'Research Scholar' at Marsh's Library, Dublin. He is the President of the James Joyce Italian Foundation. His books include Beyond Dwells Silence. Joyce in Rome (Feltrinelli, 2022). He was awarded several international prizes for his translations and his works. With Declan Kiberd (editor of Ulysses for Penguin), he is co-editor of The Book about Everything (Head of Zeus), a critical work on Joyce's Ulysses featuring contributions by Jhumpa Lahiri, Joseph O'Connor, Marina Carr, Tim Parks and Edoardo Camurri. He collaborated with several publishers: Mondadori, Feltrinelli, Bompiani, Einaudi, Il Saggiatore, Newton Compton, Safarà, Del Vecchio, Neri Pozza and Paginauno. He has translated and edited works by James Joyce (Ulysses, Finnegans Wake, Letters and Essays), Oscar Wilde (The Happy Prince, Vera or The Nihilists, The Portrait of Dorian Gray), George Bernard Shaw (St. Joan), George Orwell (1984 and Animal Farm), Nathaniel Hawthorne (The Scarlet Letter), Alasdair Gray (Lanark, 1982 Janine), Bobby Sands (Writings from Prison) and many others. He is the Italian translator of the President of Ireland Michael D. Higgins whose Poems and Writings on Revolution he edited. He is the author of countless essays and introductions on other writers such as Arthur Conan Doyle, Laurence Sterne, Jonathan Swift, Giordano Bruno, D.H. Lawrence, William Shakespeare and Simon Armitage. He has lectured in more than twentyfive countries, and participated in radio broadcasts such as Fahrenheit, La lingua batte and Tutta l'umanità ne parla on Radio3, and Moncrief on Raidió Teilifís Éireann (Irish Radio and Television). He writes for Il manifesto, Left-Avvenimenti and Il tascabile and his contributions over the years have appeared in Tuttolibri, Robinson, Il Venerdì, La Lettura, Repubblica, Il Corriere della Sera, The Irish Times, The Times (Ireland), Il Messaggero, Nuovi Argomenti, Alfabeta2, Minima&moralia, Doppiozero. PIERO TRELINI ONCE AGAIN SURPRISES US WITH A KALEIDOSCOPIC STORY THAT
FROM A CAR BECOMES THE STORY OF A WORLD.

AN EXTENDED SYNOPSIS IS AVAILABLE

"Trellinism is a one-of-a-kind phenomenon in the world".

Antonio D'Orrico – Corriere della Sera

"Piero Trellini's 'novel', R4, is a formidable journey backwards, zigzags, jumps, flashes in the saga, and one might say in the unconscious, of a car and a brand that in history, politics, news, customs and the collective imagination has imprinted indelible traces, even of tyres."

Marco Cicala – Venerdì di Repubblica

"A saga centred on Renault's iconic car, masterfully intertwining the stories of people and machines." La Lettura, Corriere della Sera

Proposed for the STREGA PRIZE 2024 by Francesco Caringella, with this motivation:

With great joy and deep conviction I propose "R4. Da Billancourt a Via Caetani" (Mondadori, 2024) by Piero Trellini for nomination for the 2024 Strega Prize.

I do so because, like authentic works of fiction, it is not one book, but several books together, knotted together by the winking, welcoming nose of France's best-selling car.

It is a book about the history of France, Italy, Europe, the two world wars, industrial dynasties and workers' struggles, a story that is told through other stories in a game of mirrors that involves and envelops an incredibly vast gallery of worlds and eras.

It is a book of men and women, of aspirations and breaths, of dreams and destinies, of suicides and adventures, of tumbles and resurrections.

It is a book that recounts, with the lucidity of a movie camera, the terrible days of Moro's kidnapping, sculpted in the harsh and cold atmosphere of the years of Lead.

It is a book that perfectly embodies the Kafkaesque lesson according to which a true novel is a blow of an ice axe that breaks the sea of ice within us." Francesco Caringella

«The R4 proceeded confidently. From Via Montalcini it drove along Villa Bonelli and came out on Via della Magliana. The driver Moretti's only concern was to arrive at destination. Like all the other men behind the wheel, turning around, at that point he saw only what he needed for his goal, sensing just the route he had decided, the other moving vehicles, the obstacles placed in front of him as he progressed and the place where to stop. His thoughts were not that different from those of all the other drivers. Because the same mechanism was driving them. That of machines which had turned men into machines.»

That nose attracted fondness. But maybe it hid its true nature. The back equipped with a large trunk and a stretched floorboard to facilitate loading operations. When the Renault 4, also known as Marie Chantal, debuted at the Grand Palais in Paris, they said it would be everyone's car. And that reddish purple R4, Export model, purchased in 1971 by Filippo Bartoli, became everyone's car. From the moment when, on May 9, 1978, after 253,839 kilometers of life, it stopped breathing together with the body it was transporting. He was the most important man in Italy. She was the best-selling car in France. She had been created in Billancourt, the Parisian factory that had modeled the face of a nation. Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, photographer Robert Doisneau, philosopher Simone Weil, singer-songwriter Georges Brassens and even Gusztáv Sebes, coach of the Mighty Magyars, had worked in its workshops. But not only them. Inside that plant, sprouted in the garden of Louis Renault's mother, other existences had wandered, destined to pass through two world conflicts, the Cold War, 1968, the economic crisis and the armed struggle. Following that extremely long thread which links an origin to an ending, line after line Pietro Trellini takes us on an incredible ride into a story that must be seen from the bottom up, where car headlights are guiding us. Along the way, everything connects. Thoughts intertwine, by Henry Ford, Adolf Hitler, Ernest Hemingway, Francis Scott Fitzgerald, Clare Boothe Luce, George Marshall, Eduardo De Filippo, George Patton, Jean Paul Sartre, Le Corbousier, Gian Giacomo and Inge Feltrinelli, Sandro Pertini, Renato Curcio, Pier Paolo Pasolini, Henry Kissinger, Paul VI, Aldo Moro and many others. The slow transformation of their minds, through an invisible chain of links, will divert history, taking that car and those thoughts to breathe the same air and embark on the same journey. To find themselves, in the last sensational pages, overlapping and coinciding in the most dramatic coordinates.

THEY HAVE WRITTEN ABOUT HIS BOOKS:

In the last four years, Piero Trellini scored three masterpieces (I think it's a world record). Besides this superb L'Affaire ("The Affaire", the father of all legal thrillers), he published La partita. Il romanzo di Italia Brasile ("The match. The novel of Italy-Brazil", an Iliad of soccer) and Danteide ("Danteid", a Recherche of lost Dante Alighieri).

Antonio D'Orrico, 7 del Corriere

"The Dreyfus case remains a primordial scene and a vertiginous laboratory of Modernity. Piero Trellini has given back that vertigo in a centrifugal book where, like in a Russian doll, each story opens another one and all of them end up intersecting in a formidable, explosive glimpse of an era.

Of a period marked by irreversible revolutions in ideology, media, technology, science, art.

Mutations that in some way still concern us".

Il Venerdì di Repubblica

"Gripping, titanic, grandiose for the capacity of the author, faithful to historical documents, to tell the unbelievable tale of captain Dreyfus. And in our opinion the book of the year." Giovanni

Pacchiano

"An extraordinary book by Trellini. A great knowledge of facts and great storytelling capacity, which is very rare". Giuseppe Scaraffia, Il Foglio

"A remarkable tale, as everything pouring out of a magnificent obsession".

Marco Cicala – Il Venerdì di Repubblica

"Trellini transformed his sweet, strong "obsession" in this volume representing a soccer Odyssey (...) I had never read, on a single match, anything as complete and engaging. In its genre: a masterpiece." Darwin Pastorin – Huffington Post

"You will wonder how it is possible to match the size of Moby Dick writing of twenty-two men that are kicking a ball... Trellini has taken it upon himself to explore all that can be explored about the protagonists of that challenge..." Giuseppe Culicchia – La Stampa

"A big book, but you read it in one breath: the match arrives only after about four hundred pages, but Trellini - like a good crime writer - is very skillful in slowly making our mouths water". Corriere dello Sport

"The match" by Piero Trellini is an extraordinary endeavor (...) Books like this can't be found anymore. It's a super novel (just like we say super hero), it has super powers, the strongest of which is that he makes us relive the competition with unbearable suspense, as if we didn't know that Paolo Rossi would score three goals. I recommend "The match" to those who are not soccer fans. They will discover many things. Of life and not of soccer".

Antonio D'Orrico, 7Corriere

«An ode to soccer, a heart-wrenching ode to the most beautiful game in the world. The 90 minutes, from the starting whistle, begin at page 429, not before. Before there's a sum of wonderful stories, that keep you glued to the page".

Walter Veltroni, La Gazzetta dello Sport

"Danteid is all you don't expect from a book on Dante: Trellini doesn't settle for the tale of well noted facts about the Tuscan poet, but as a neorealist director, he investigates, he follows his character (starting from the finding of the poets's skeleton) and describes him as an ordinary man. Trellini knows how to write, he's a real writer, reading these pages you are overwhelmed, you have fun, you feel tormented, you find yourself in a plot worthy of the best TV series. Here are his pages!"

Roberto Saviano

"In Danteid every reference is purely Dantesque. Trellini uses only original spare parts. Technically the book is a spin-off, but as if Dante in person had written it. Things are then complicated by the type of writer that Trellini is... Danteid is a cross between Dante's software and Trellini's software".

Corriere della Sera, Antonio D'Orrico

"An unpredictable novel that, starting from the recovery of the head of the supreme poet in a wooden crate in Ravenna, in 1865, retraces the figures, the atmospheres, the characters who surrounded him: from Paolo and Francesca to Guido Cavalcanti, from Guido da Montefeltro to count Ugolino." L'Espresso

"Among the many books published this year, the most audacious and pop is Danteid by Piero Trellini (Bompiani). Serious commitment, result of laborious research (more than five thousand texts consulted indicates the bibliography) and inspired by the desire to make Dante interesting for the young; not an interpretation of the work nor a biography in a narrow sense, but an attempt to describe the world surrounding Dante, what he has seen. The book has the pace of an adventure novel, if not to say even a TV series. The story progresses through plot twists, phantasmagorical coincidences, mysteries, striking generalizations.

Walter Siti, Domani

Piero Trellini writes for "la Repubblica", "La Stampa", "Il Sole 24 ore", "Domani", "Il Messaggero", "il Manifesto", "Il Foglio" and "Art e Dossier". He published La partita. Il romanzo di Italia-Brasile ("The match. The story of Italy v Brazil", Mondadori 2019; 2020 Bancarella Sport Prize, 2020 Ape Prize, 2020 "First novel" Mastercard Letteratura Prize, 2020 Massarosa "Technical jury" Prize), that was an immediate critical and public success and on which, among others, were based a television series, airing on Sky, and a photographic edition, Le immagini di Italia Brasile ("The images of Italy-Brazil", Mondadori 2022), a proper "illustrated Artist's book". He also published Danteide ("Danteid", Bompiani 2021) and L'Affaire ("The Affaire", Bompiani 2022), nominated "Book of the year" by the readers of Corriere della Sera.

A FRESH, COMPELLING VOICE IN ITALIAN FICTION

A NEW UNFORGETTABLE MAIN CHARACTER

WAITING FOR THE WORLD TO CALL IS A DEEPLY POETIC AND MOVING NOVEL ABOUT FACING THE MANY UNEXPECTED CHALLENGES LIFE LAYS BEFORE US.

MARIA FRANCESCA VENTURO'S IRRESISTIBLE AND GENUINE NARRATIVE UNVEILS THE HOPES, DREAMS AND FRUSTRATIONS OF THOSE WHO CHOOSE TO DEVOTE THEMSELVES TO THE MOST BEAUTIFUL JOB IN THE WORLD.

Carolina Altieri gets up every morning at dawn and she goes to work. She leaves home dressed up flawlessly, gets on the bus and turns her cell phone on, hoping to receive a call from any school. Hers is the most beautiful profession in the world, but she is still a substitute teacher with no clear-cut future, and no end to this in sight. Living day by day, she cannot conjugate the verbs to the future, either for herself or for her children. Through hours that flow in an endless present, interrupted only by visits to a tender grandmother and by the overwhelming and imperfect love to Erasmus, Carolina narrates the daring world of the school, populated by hopeful commuters and lazy secretaries, as well as her passion for those children whose eager smiles, unexpected truths and sudden hugs never cease to surprise and enrich her. It will be this passion that forces Carolina to make a change to her eternally suspended life and change her destiny.

"My heart is heavy but I'm ready, with the lipstick on the lips and the knee-length skirt. Ready to not know where to go. Uncertainty requires some preparation".

Mariafrancesca Venturo has worked as actress, animator, bartender, concierge, shop assistant and pastry. She is a primary school teacher and she is now teaching in a Montessori school. Waiting for the world to call is her first novel.
